Red Tanks Moving Toward Allies
Jittery Phils Beaten Again, 3 to 2

Coleman's Hit in 9th Wins Third Series Game

National Leaguers Kick Away Lead On Hamner's Error; Heintzelman Blows

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—World Series jitters caught up with the Phillies' Whiz Kids today and before 64,505 fans they dismally fluffed off the Series' third game to those cold opportunists, the Yankees, in Yankee Stadium.

By a score of 3 to 2, the Phils' third straight one-run defeat of the series, the Yankees snatched the ball game in which they were trailing, 2-1, in the eighth inning. Then the Phils began to mess it up, made the Yanks a gift of the tying run, and asked for the defeat that overtook them in the ninth.

Except for the sorrowing Philadelphia fans in the huge crowd, this was the most exciting of the series contests, and out of it emerged little Gerry Coleman as the Yankee hero. With his third hit, a long single off Russ Meyer, he drove in the winning run. In fact, with a previous single and a walk, he figured in all of the Yankees' runs.

Hamner Becomes Goat

From the scalp of young Gran Hamner, the Phils' shortstop, the goat's horns sprouted. It was Hamner's ghastly fumble that gave the Yanks the tying run with two out in the eighth.

The Phils outhit the Yankees, 10 to 7, but they were asking for what ultimately happened. A Whiz Kid misplay figured in each Yankee run. In a sudden seizure of wildness, their starting pitcher, Ken Heintzelman, walked three men in a row in the eighth to invite the tying run that followed on Hamner's boot of Bobby Brown's grounder.

And when the Yankees pressured home the winning run in the ninth—another rally that started after two were out—it was a fumble by Jimmy Bloodworth, charitably scored as a hit, that set the scenery for Coleman's climactic blow.

Looks Like Finish Today

And so the Yankees lead the series three games to none, and tomorrow are in position to apply the crusher, with Vic Raschi their man on the mound. The Whiz Kids have recent memories of Raschi who shut them out, 1-0, with two hits in the series opener.

With his first line pitchers used Heintzelman, after two were out as usual, to take a 1-0 lead. Phil Rizzuto wheedled a walk out of the Phils' gray-haired lefthander who was getting a series starting chance despite his mere three vic-

FCC May End NBC's Video 'Dominance'

Action Studied Pending Lifting of 'Freeze' on New Telecast Stations

The Federal Communications Commission said yesterday it will consider steps to end the National Broadcasting Co.'s "dominant" position in telecasting until the Government's "freeze" on new video stations is lifted.

It said it made a survey last May which showed NBC supplied more programs to one-station communities than all other networks combined. This situation, the FCC said, "tends to prevent competition and to deprive the public of a diversity of program choice."

As a remedy, the agency said it will consider making temporary rules limiting the amount of time any one station can give one network. It asked "interested parties" to file their comments by November 13. After hearing these, it will make up its mind whether to impose the orders.

Rule Only Temporary

The FCC emphasized it is considering only a "temporary rule or rules to remain in effect while the scarcity of television broadcast stations persists."

Its survey showed, it said, that in 17 one-station communities, NBC had more than 49 percent of television network time—more than all three other networks combined. The others are Columbia Broadcasting System, Dumont, and the American Broadcasting Co.

NBC held a "dominant" position in two- and three-station Communities. In three two-station communities it had 45 percent of the time. In six three-station cities it held 35 percent of the time.

The FCC acknowledged the situation results, "at least in part," from its own "freeze" on construction of new television stations since September, 1948. Although the freeze is temporary, problem occurs at a crucial time it said the network competition in the development of the television industry."

The agency said its proposed

Wife Loses Child in Divorce, Vainly Asks for Reconciliation

By Joseph Paull
Post Reporter

Stunned by the realization that she was losing her 4-year-old girl, a mother fought vainly yesterday to go back to the man who had just divorced her.

For 15 minutes she begged and threatened in a District Courtroom, down the corridors, and for two blocks away. In the end, she walked alone, and without tears.

The divorced woman is Mrs. Verna J. Dawn, 28, a pretty, slim clerk-stenographer with the Department of Agriculture. Her husband, winner in the court battle, is James E. Dawn, jr., 27, a Metropolitan policeman.

They were married in 1945, and have one child, Janice Aileene, born a year later. Both husband and wife wanted a divorce—at first.

Mrs. Dawn sued on grounds of cruelty, saying that he beat her, kicked her legs, and pulled her hair. The husband charged she did not change the baby's diapers and clothing and deserted her home two years ago.

But Mrs. Dawn did not really begin her grim battle until the suit was decided.

Judge Edward M. Curran granted Dawn the divorce and the child.

"May I say something?" she shouted at him. "Did you give him my child?"

The judge nodded, but said she would be given the right to see the child a reasonable amount.

"I'll go back with him. I'll go back to Jim. For the child, I'll go back," she said. "I'll even go back to live at the Dawns (her in-laws). Maybe Jim, he's married now, will stay in nights."

"If there is a possibility of a reconciliation," began the judge.

"I don't think it will be possible now," replied Dawn's lawyer, H. P. Long.

Judge Curran left the bench, and Mrs. Dawn went up to her former husband.

"Jim, would you like to have me back? I want to come back. We have a baby . . ."

He shrugged a shoulder and stepped aside. She waited just outside the courtroom door, and fol-

2 Ex-Police Officials in N. Y. Sought

NEW YORK, Oct. 6 (AP).—Two former police inspectors were sought today after raids on eight policemen's homes brought to light fancy, high-priced television sets described as payoff gifts from gamblers.

Both inspectors quit recently during probe of a 20-million-dollar Brooklyn gambling ring that paid off cops for protection. A third inspector was suspended.

Police Commissioner Thomas F. Murphy ordered a search for the two missing men—former Inspector John E. Flynn and former Assistant Chief Inspector Edward G. Moran.

Brooklyn racket-busters said they found a TV set in Flynn's home.

The suspended inspector was Frederick A. Hofsaes, whose home also was raided.

At least four TV sets were seized in the raids—some of them reportedly worth as much as $1800.

The TV sets and other seized loot were declared part of the "ice"—protection money or gifts—paid to police by Harry Gross' 20-million-a-year gambling ring.

'Mafia Head' Got $80,000 Track Loans

CHICAGO, Oct. 6 (AP).—The Senate Crime Committee today was told that a member of the old Capone gang got two big bundles of money from race track operators.

Named as key figure in the transactions was Paul "The Waiter" Ricca, a former henchman of Al Capone. He also has been described by Senator Wiley (R., Wis.), a member of the committee, as the leader of the secret organization known as the "Mafia."

The committee first questioned Ricca about the $391,000 he is reported to have spent in the last three years. The committee termed his answers "unsatisfactory."

Then Hugo Bennett, auditor for the Miami Beach (Fla.) Kennel Club and the Sportsman's Park race track in suburban Cicero, was questioned about his dealings with Ricca.

The sessions were closed. But Chairman Kefauver (D., Tenn.) passed along this information at a news conference:

Bennett said he loaned Ricca $40,000 in 1948 and another $40,000 in 1950. In order to raise the cash, Bennett said he borrowed $20,000 from William Johnston, head of the Miami Beach Kennel Club and a big operator in the dog and horse race field. He also borrowed $15,000 from Max Silverberg of Chicago and Miami, who has concessions at Johnston's tracks here and in Florida. The rest of the money, Bennett said, was his own.

He said neither Johnston nor Silverberg were told what the money was for.

"Mr. Bennett gave the committee no satisfactory answer as to why he made these loans," Senator Kefauver told reporters. "The circumstances of the loans seem fishy—very suspicious."

He announced Bennett would be questioned again at some future time.

Bennett reported, the Senator said, that the loans were secured by a mortgage on Ricca's $300,000 farm in Illinois and a mortgage on a home Ricca owns in Long Beach, Ind. Bennett, he added, produced the mortgages.

Kefauver said Bennett told him he had been working for race tracks since 1932. He was given his first job by Edward J. O'Hare, president of the Sportsman's Park track. O'Hare was slain here in 1939.

Other developments included:

1. Democratic Gov. Adlai E. Stevenson of Illinois pleaded for Federal laws to curb slot machine and handbook information operations.

2. Mrs. Ann Fischetti, blonde wife of Charles Fischetti, hoodlum and cousin of Al Capone, was brought before the committee twice. She refused to answer questions about her husband. He is reported to be hiding in Mexico to avoid testimony.

3. Committee investigators reported finding "wide open" gambling and 20 stripteasers and a

Pledge to Russia and China

U. S., Britain Vow U. N. Forces Will Not Push Beyond Korea

NEW YORK, Oct. 6 (AP).—The United States and Britain gave solemn assurances today that United Nations forces will not cross the Korean border into Communist China or the Soviet Union.

These pledges were made as several influential delegates suggested privately the president of the Fifth General Assembly, Nasrollah Entezam, sound a call for the North Koreans to cease hostilities. If Entezam consents, this is expected to be made immediately after passage of the 8-power Korean peace plan, perhaps Saturday. The Assembly adjourned without vote. The Saturday session was set for 10:45 a. m.

Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Y. Vishinsky paid no attention to these pledges in his wind-up speech on the Korean problem. He attacked again American and British assertions the occupation forces would remain in Korea only as long as necessary.

He said the reverse is true and added that the longer an occupation army stays the harder it is to establish a democratic regime. He rejected once more the majority plan, saying it would not end the struggle.

Three speakers are left—Greece, the Soviet Ukraine and India—before the voting begins.

Warren R. Austin, United States, and Kenneth Younger, Britain, spoke for the eight-nation plan in the final stages of the Assembly debate.

"We Want Nothing"

Younger told the Assembly the U. N. had taken a historic decision in June to resist aggression by force. He said if anyone outside the Assembly—for instance Communist China—feared that U. N. forces might carry hostilities on beyond Korea or remain in Korea longer than the U. N. objectives demanded, "I give them my solemn assurance . . . that their fears have no foundation."

Austin endorsed the British pledge in his speech. He said also the quicker Korea is permit-

Marshall Sees U. S. Weakness As Lack of Trained Soldiers

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Defense Secretary George C. Marshall declared yesterday that America's chief military weakness—our greatest hazard today, he called it—is a shortage of trained soldiers.

Addressing the Conference of Mayors, the general disclosed that in the early days of the Korean fighting we were so short of manpower that we had to integrate 30,000 South Korean infantrymen and artillerymen into American units. They saved the situation, he added.

We found ourselves without trained reserves, Marshall said, and had to strip our few divisions in the United States to provide replacements for casualties in Korea. That must never happen again, he told the Mayors.

While he did not elaborate, listeners felt the Secretary was urging approval of both adequate funds for a larger Army and universal military training.

Pointing to logistical problems involved—the great distances, large amounts of men and supplies involved—General Marshall said we can never hope to have our troops deployed in advance to meet sudden threats all over the world.

Instead we must rely on our great logistical forces to mobilize after the attack has come, he said.

In this connection, Marshall rejected the concept of preventive war. Without mentioning the term, he said that democracies, by the very nature of the way they operate, must let a dictator have the advantage of surprise and of picking the time and place of attack. And he indicated strong belief that that's the way things should be.

The other major lesson, said Marshall, was that we must have larger numbers of trained soldiers, including a reserve of replacements. In Korea, this great disadvantage was measured against the many advantages we possessed. The latter included, he went on, the fortunate geographical position of our Japanese bases, air supremacy, sea power which could operate to the greatest effect because Korea was a peninsula, and the fact that we had a great military commander in charge—MacArthur.

Deferment Plan Wins Hershey O.K.

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

A plan providing draft deferment for the Nation's brightest and most promising students, drawn up by a committee of scientific and professional leaders, yesterday won the approval of Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, Selective Service Director.

General Hershey said he agreed "with the general tenor" of the plan, and indicated that it fitted in with his demand for a "tough" deferment policy.

Under terms of the deferment proposal, all students—whether in high school, college, graduate school, or in advanced training—must pass a standard test, and on top of that, demonstrate by their scholastic work that they show what General Hershey calls "special promise" of becoming leaders in their fields.

The recommended policy is the joint effort of a group of Selective Service advisory committees, covering the fields of humanities, healing arts, agricultural and biological sciences, engineering sciences, physical sciences and social sciences.

The committee estimated that putting their plan into effect would result in the deferment of more than 3 percent of the men in any age group, which is approximately 210,000 of the men in the draft age of 19 through 25.

"In a Nation whose security has come to depend upon essential civilian as well as military personnel," the committee reported, "this group (of deferred students) could be logically considered as

TOKYO (Saturday), Oct. 7 (U.P.). The South Korean Eighth Division attacking north from the Uijongbu area north of Seoul is less than a mile from the thirty-eighth parallel, it was announced today.

It was indicated they had replaced the U. S. First Marine Division in the area north of Seoul.

BULLETIN

TOKYO (Saturday), Oct. 7 (U.P.). Two enemy tank convoys were rumbling southward in North Korea today to meet the threat of a forthcoming three-way amphibious knockout blow by United Nations forces.

As Gen. Douglas MacArthur shrouded his own major striking forces in secrecy, returning Air Force pilots reported the enemy convoys moving down from northwestern and northeastern Korea. Marine fighter-bombers ripped into one of them in attacks Friday night.

Reports from Kimpo airfield said a huge convoy reported last Tuesday stretching over an estimated 100 miles below the Manchurian border now was reported by air force reconnaissance pilots to have been broken up into smaller units north of the enemy capital of Pyongyang.

Allies Advance Northward

TOKYO (Saturday), Oct. 7 (AP).—Three South Korean divisions advanced in North Korea today while the bulk of United Nations forces massed below the thirty-eighth parallel boundary, waiting for orders to push north and crush the remnant Red Korean army.

The South Korean Sixth Division struck across the arbitrary boundary into Communist North Korea Friday. Field reports said its lead elements had entered the hydro electric center of Hwachon, 7 miles north of the thirty-eighth parallel and some 50 air miles inland from the east coast.

This made three Republican divisions north of the mythical line, drawn by Russia and the United States for the purpose of taking the surrender of Japanese in Korea at the end of World War II.

That line had remained an unrecognized but actual frontier between the rival Korean regimes until the Communists crossed it June 25 in their ill-fated invasion of the south.

The South Korean Third Division, advancing up the east coast highway, was reported near Tong-

Catching Dogs Takes Brains, Catcher Tells Truman, Lewis

OMAHA, Oct. 6 (U.P.).—A dog catcher said today that President Truman and John L. Lewis "don't seem to realize it takes a lot of brains to catch dogs."

"People who work with dogs all over the country will resent all these cracks about dog catchers," said Wendell Conley, kennel manager for the Humane Society's dog pound here.

Conley commented on the letter President Truman wrote to a Colorado legislator saying he wouldn't appoint Lewis to be a dog catcher. Lewis said that the President could "ill afford to have more brains in the Department of Dog than in the Department of State."

"That makes people think dog catchers are kind of dumb," said Conley. "You have to know what you're doing in this business."

Conley's boss, executive secretary John Welch of the Nebraska Humane Society, backed Conley up.

"Dog pounds used to be operated in a rather crude manner and catchers sometimes were low down characters," Welch said, but now stray dogs are handled humanely and in an expert fashion by "people with brains."

State Department Press Officer Michael J. McDermott denounced as "contemptible" yesterday John L. Lewis' reference to "intellectual poodles" and pusillanimous pups" in the department.

McDermott, making it clear he was speaking for himself and not the State Department, angrily defended his colleagues against slighting remarks made by the United Mine Workers president yesterday.

"His reference to State Department people who are innocent bystanders are contemptible," the square-jawed Massachusetts Irishman snorted.

Stung, Hurt, Car Wrecked

Driver Falls Into Wasp Nest As Auto Hurtles Embankment

A striking Arlington plumber was injured yesterday when his car plunged down an embankment off MacArthur blvd. and he fell out into a nest of wasps.

He is W. E. Johnson, 25, of 1520 N. Longfellow st., Arlington.

A witness to the crash was Police Pvt. Ralph Moody, of 5200 MacArthur blvd., who also suffered wasp stings when he slid down the embankment to rescue Johnson. He was taken to Emergency Hospital and later transferred to Mount Alto Hospital, where his condition was reported not critical.

He suffered a possible fractured pelvis, a fracture of the right arm, injuries to a wrist and ribs.

Moody, who was on motorcycle patrol, said Johnson's car, a brand new 1950 Ford with only 800 miles on the speedometer, was demolished.

Moody reported he saw Johnson, who was alone, in the 4900 block of MacArthur blvd., and that the car failed to negotiate a curve.

The car caromed off a curb, into bushes, then slid down an embankment. While in midflight, the policeman said, the car hit some obstruction and "jacknifed just like a swimmer diving."

Johnson's parents live at 4705 MacArthur blvd. The son is married and has a 1-year-old daughter.

Following another accident, a six-year-old Arlington boy was taken to Arlington Hospital in a critical condition with a possible skull fracture. He is Richard Ferguson of 800 S. Wakefield st., Arlington. Police said Richard was riding his bicycle at 9th and S. Taylor sts., in Arlington, when he ran into an automobile driven by Charles Ray Rodwell, 41, of 704 S. George Mason dr., Alexandria. No charges were placed against Rodwell.

Memorial Rites

Dead Saluted By Generals On Korea Hill

By Tom Lambert

WITH U. N. FORCES IN SOUTH KOREA, Oct. 6 (AP).—A spirited wind raised little swirls of dust among the white crosses, Stars of David and stark white stakes massed on the red-brown, dusty hillside.

The half-masted United Nations flag fluttered in the breeze.

Then the voice of the chaplain, Col. Frank Tobey, floated across the Marines, soldiers and South Koreans at today's first memorial service at the only U. N. cemetery in this area:

"The Americans and South Koreans whose bodies lie beneath these crosses, these Stars of David, the white markers, died for the protection of all freedom-loving people of the world."

The phrases drifted up the hillside, past the graves of Frank Pagano and Gerald Feinstein and Perry Bevens and over the withering leaves in the glazed blue clay pot at the head of Henry J. Hampton's grave.

To the west lay the sea, hardly visible. At the foot of the graveyard lay the road to Seoul, bustling with men and weapons, along which these dead had marched and fought a few days ago.

Then Maj. Gen. E. M. Almond, commander of the Tenth Corps which took Seoul from the Reds, stepped to the microphone.

"These men who lie here in this hallowed spot gave their lives, like Nathan Hale, for liberty and the dignity of man. They were inspired to risk death itself to preserve the right of an individual to go where he likes, do what he likes, think what he likes . . ."

Almond's voice deepened: "The despotic principles which guide those of the Communist ideology are repugnant to all of us, even those of our own nation whose weakness is favoring Communist license under the democratic safeguards of our own free governments . . ."

He stepped back a pace . . . looked at the graves . . . then back at those here for the ceremony.

"Personally, I salute them. I ask you to do likewise as individuals, not as an organization."

Hands snapped to foreheads in salute. An Army band began playing softly.

Then Almond took the first of four wreaths of fresh flowers and laid it on a grave. The marker bore no name. The dead was unknown.

Marine Maj. Gen. C. P. Smith then laid a wreath on the grave of R. C. Mathony. Army Maj. Gen. David Barr placed one on the grave of Walter L. Moore.

The assembly stood at attention then and a Marine-Army honor guard fired three volleys across the sparse brown hills of South Korea.

The wind whispered among the graves, over the cross to which was attached the note: "To the best friend a man could have, from all the men of the (Marine) First Amphibious Truck Battalion. May he rest in peace."

TENTH CORPS HEADQUARTERS, KOREA, Oct. 6 (AP).—Four American prisoners of war who escaped from the North Koreans arrived here today, footsore and thin after marching 200 miles with their retreating Red captors.

Three gave accounts of good treatment in enemy hands. The fourth was sleeping during this interview.

They are Lieut. Thomas T. Jones, 26, Champaign, Ill., whose wife lives in Tokyo and whose mother, Mrs. Jean Jones, lives in Darien, Conn.; 2d Lieut. Howard C. Smith, 25, San Diego, Calif.; Pfc. Jack D. Pridley, Tucson, Ariz., and Pfc. Joseph T. Charland, Waterville, Me.

En route to a Red prisoner-of-war collection point near parallel thirty-eight, they escaped when North Korean soldiers and civilians in the Chunchon area fled before advancing United Nations troops. They drifted to the roadside, pretending to fix their Korean shoes, then edged farther off the road and into a schoolhouse, where they slept while the Red retreat continued.

To Be Sent to Japan

As Allied forces approached, the four contacted South Korean units and were taken to American advisers accompanying the units. They are scheduled to be evacuated to Japan tomorrow.

Lieutenants Smith and Jones credited their good luck to Providence. They said they guessed "the good Lord was watching over us." The four were captive for periods ranging from 30 to 60 days.

Pridley said the thing he missed most during captivity and asked for first when he contacted Allied forces was American food. He had lost 30 pounds.

Smith's Second Division Infantry outfit was ambushed by North Koreans near Pohang, on the east coast, August 10.

"A group of about six captured me," he related. "As soon as they got me out of the battle area they gave me some bread they had taken in a raid on our kitchen truck, plus cigarettes."

Says Treatment Was Good

Smith started north with 18 other American prisoners. One was killed in a United States air raid on Andong. Whereabouts of the other 17 was unknown. Smith presumes they were taken into North Korea.

"Our treatment was good," he continued. "They killed a pig for us one night, and we had roast pork. We were given two packs of cigarettes every other day.

He was moved to Andong, part way by truck. The Reds took the Americans' combat boots during this period, but Smith insisted his guards were "princes of fellows, wonderful guys."

After the United States raid on Andong, Smith was moved to the war prisoner collection point above Chunchon, near the thirty-eighth parallel.

Smith, a forward artillery observer, and Jones said the Reds asked them what they thought of the "People's Army," and seemed to believe firmly in their chances for victory. Smith told newsmen the army was "about the most disorganized outfit I ever saw."

Saw No Russians

Both officers said the Reds sang the usual Communist propaganda songs about "Wall Street bankers" and "imperialism." The two said they fell in with this line because it resulted in more food and cigarettes for themselves and the other Americans with them.

Neither saw any Russians with the North Koreans, although Smith and Pridley recalled noting with the Reds one night a small group of men who were larger and dressed differently.

Jones, Pridley and Charland of the First Cavalry Division's Eighth Engineer Battalion were captured September 9 a few miles north of Taegu. They went into the line on a hill, and their unit apparently was overrun. With four others they hid in a ravine 7 days until captured.

The three were together during their captivity and met Smith at the war prisoner collection station north of Chanchon.

D. C. Officer Tells of Trials When Short on Blood Supply

A Red Cross dispatch from a Korean battlefront yesterday told of the trials of a Washington doctor, caught short on blood supplies.

Col. Fugitt

The Washingtonian, Lieut. Col. Elmer Fugitt, reported that for a tense 30 minutes his mobile surgical hospital was without blood. In his cluster of rain-soaked tents, litters of wounded lay readied for surgery.

"We'd used a lot of blood the past two hours," he said. Much of it had come from soldiers and medics attached to his command. They weren't ready to give more, although willing, he reported.

Colonel Fugitt of 1642 Primrose rd. nw. gave the order to administer plasma, the "next best thing" to whole blood, but before the operations began new Red Cross blood supplies arrived.

The daily shipment to Korea of the war's most precious commodity, flown by Military Air Transport planes from Washington and 34 other Red Cross collection centers in America, had met with a temporary snag in the relay to the front, it was later reported. Colonel Fugitt's supply rolled in on a truck.

Lieut. Erin Cannon, Army Nurse, of Augusta, Ga., administered the first bottle, the dispatch noted. It was labeled "Red Cross Regional Blood Center, Savannah, Ga." Her patient, too, turned out to be a Georgian.

Here the salt breezes temper the air making it cool and delightful, so that you and the kiddies can spend carefree days in fun and frolic.
Our guests are amazed when they first see Cape St. Claire with its wide, white sandy beach, the sapphire blue Chesapeake, shady groves to the water's edge, great ocean ships just off shore, white winged yachts dipping and curtsying nearby, motor craft landing pleasure parties, fishing, boating, swiming all manner of sports in an ideal setting.
It is impossible to describe the charm of Cape St. Claire and equally impossible not to feel it. It is a charm composed of so many elements that the loveliness of a great stretch of shimmering water, clear sunshine, invigorating air and the glorious blue of the sky are soothing to the soul.
Cape St. Claire invites you to drive down and admire its large, shaded area, to enjoy its pungent wood-scent, take deep draughts of invigorating salt air and see for yourself how Cape St. Claire meets your need. It is hard to realize there is such a restful haven so near to Washington where one feels miles away from care and business and which may be reached by a short, delightful drive over a scenic and well-paved highway.

AP Cable Tells Korean Here Family Is Safe, Well in Seoul

A correspondent's cable, a wire story and the inquiries of newspapermen yesterday brought Walter K. Park the news he has waited for so anxiously—his family is safe and well in Korea.

Park, a member of the Korean Purchasing Commission, came to Washington last April for a year's stay. Then came the Korean war and no word of his family.

Yesterday, an Associated Press correspondent sent a terse cable from Seoul, which was immediately sent out on the Associated Press wires:

"The family of Walter K. Park, Washington, D. C., member of the Korean Purchasing Commission, was found safe and well in Seoul today."

Washington newspaper reporters called Park at once. It was the first word the Korean had received that his wife, Seung Won, their four children, ranging from 2½ to 14 years of age, and his mother had survived the two battles in which United Nations troops lost and rewon Seoul.

"It is such good news, it is overwhelming," was all Park could say. He hopes now he will hear directly from them.

Park who is staying at 1752 Lanier pl. nw., said he believes that O. H. P. King, an Associated Press Korea correspondent who is a personal friend, looked up the Park family and sent the message through news channels with the hope it would reach him.

Veteran Included

Two More D. C. Soldiers Are Wounded

Corpl. Gross Sergt. Grant

A Purple Heart veteran of World War II is one of two Army men from Washington listed as wounded on the most recent Defense Department casualty list.

He is Sergt. James Grant, 25, of 605 New Jersey ave. nw. The other wounded D. C. man on the list is Corpl. Roland Gross, 20, of 1324 New Jersey ave. nw.

Sergeant Grant was slightly wounded on September 16, according to the telegram received by his sister, Mrs. Ruth Williams of the New Jersey ave. address. In a letter, Sergeant Grant told his sister he had been in action since July 10.

He received a Bronze Star for his action at the town of Yechon, according to reports sent to Mrs. Williams. While advancing on the town, Company M, of the Twenty-fourth Infantry was temporarily halted by snipers. Sergeant Grant volunteered to move into town and helped clear the way with rifle fire and grenades, she said.

Sergeant Grant attended schools in Warrenton, Va. After serving in World War II with the Ninety-second Division in Germany and France, he spent four years in Japan. His wife, Olivia, is now in Japan.

His brother, Sergt. Samuel Grant, 29, is now with the Seventy-sixth Anti-Aircraft Battalion in Korea.

Shortly before he was reported "slightly wounded on September 19," Corporal Gross wrote his mother, Mrs. Dorothy Gross, 1324 Monroe st. nw., of his promotion to corporal.

After two years in Japan, Mrs. Gross said, he was sent to Korea with the Twenty-fourth Division on July 5.

A former cadet at Dunbar High School, Corporal Gross left school at 17 to enlist. Two brothers, Navy veterans of World War II, are now in the Army.

3 Virginia Soldiers On Casualty List

Three Virginia soldiers were included yesterday on the Defense Department's casualty list. They are:

First Lieut. Thomas Payne Wilson, husband of Mrs. Elizabeth C. Wilson of Staunton, Va., killed in action.

Pfc. Charles R. Carpenter, son of Charles C. Carpenter of Front Royal, and Pfc. Al Shifflett, son of Mrs. Blanche M. Shifflett of Harrisonburg, wounded.

Corpl. Dallas Leon Warble, brother of Mrs. Edith V. Bigar of Box 561, Harrisonburg, prisoner of war.

French Lose 2 More Posts

SAIGON, French Indo-China, Oct. 6 (U.P.).—Communist-led Viet Minh rebels attacked along a 35-mile front near the Chinese border today and forced the French to retreat from two more frontier posts, the fifth and sixth, they have abandoned since September 18.

French military headquarters said Viet Minh troops had launched isolated assaults the length of Indo-China, from Tonkin province in the north to Cochin China in the south, but the main Red fire was concentrated on "several outposts" in the strategic 35-mile stretch along the border of Communist China.

By proclamation of President Truman, an estimated 5000 doctors, dentists and veterinarians were ordered up yesterday for draft registration on October 16.

The registration order covers the three groups of medical men who were trained at Government expense during World War II, but who saw less than 21 months of military service.

The proclamation also applies to those men who were deferred so they could continue their professional education.

Others Ordered Up

The Presidential directive also ordered the registration of all other draft-eligible physicians, dentists, and veterinarians by next January 16.

Under a recently passed act of Congress, doctors, dentists, and "allied specialists" under the age of 50 who are not members of a reserve military organization are subject to the draft.

The President's proclamation does not call for the registration—at least, for the time being—of such "skilled specialists" as optometrists, pharmacists, osteopaths, and the like.

Registration Required

The proclamation specifically requires the registration of men who have received the following degrees: Bachelor of medicine, doctor of medicine, doctor of dental surgery, doctor of medical dentistry, doctor of veterinary surgery, doctor of veterinary medicine.

Those receiving any such degree after October 16 must register within five days after getting it.

Men called into active military service as a result of the draft will serve not more than 21 months. Men subject to the medical draft who volunteer for duty—the real purpose of this special draft act—will be paid a bonus of $100 a month.

Interior Wins Ores Dispute With Sawyer

NYHT News Service

The first publicized inter-agency squabble of the defense effort has been settled through the intervention of W. Stuart Symington, chairman of the national security resources board, it was disclosed yesterday.

The fight was between the Interior and Commerce departments over the preliminary processing of iron, steel and other ores. Symington, designated by President Truman as co-ordinator of the home front production effort, ruled in favor of the Interior Department in the dispute.

Symington on Wednesday called together Secretary of Commerce Charles Sawyer and Secretary of the Interior Oscar L. Chapman. At an hour-and-a-half meeting, he outlined the solution he favored and indicated he expected an early announcement that the dispute had been settled.

The announcement came yesterday in the form of a joint memorandum by the two Cabinet members. Under it, effective immediately the Commerce Department will turn over to the Interior Department authority to administer priorities over:

1. Non-ferrous metals and minerals and ferro-alloys up to and including the smelting and refining stage when ores become metal ingots.

2. Steel and iron, which are ferrous metals, up to but not including the blast furnace operation.

Interior also was given authority to administer priorities over the use of shelters and refineries.

The powers transferred to Interior originally were assigned to the Commerce Department by a presidential order.

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

FADING REDS—American military policemen guard a long line of approximately 1000 North Korean prisoners as they are marched along a main street in Seoul on their way to a prison stockade following their surrender. General MacArthur's headquarters announced yesterday that more than 40,000 Reds had been taken prisoner by Allied forces

Copy of B-29 Held Only Plane Russia Has for Atom Bombing

LONDON, Oct. 6 (AP).—The only known Russian plane capable of dropping atom bombs at long range is a copy of the American B-29, Jane's "All the World's Aircraft" reported today.

The authoritative annual survey also listed a 652-mile-an-hour jet fighters as the fastest known Red military plane.

Jane's said the Reds claim to have a faster-than-sound fighter in the "Yakovlev Supersonic" but added "insufficient information is available."

The survey said no Soviet counter has so far been found to official United States claims that 10 different types of American jet and rocket-powered aircraft have already exceeded the speed of sound.

Jane's indicated Russia's closest approach to American A-bomb toting "heavies" is the Tu-70, adapted from America's Boeing B-29.

But with a top speed of 320 miles an hour and a maximum range of 2485 miles, the Tu-70 falls short of America's B-50—top speed over 400 and top range 6000—or the giant Consolidated Vultee B-36 with its 10,000 mile range and top speed of over 350 miles an hour.

Russia has two new high-speed fighters, both believed to be the work of the famed Soviet designer A. S. Yakovlev, Jane's said. Jane's also declared there are some grounds for believing that power is supplied by a British gas turbine.

Britain supplied Russia with 55 Rolls-Royce jet engines of the Derwent and Nene types up to January, 1948.

(An Associated Press report of a United States survey showed that the British have supplied jet military planes to most of the world's air forces.

(A study made public by the Aircraft Industries Association lists British jet fighters as standard first line equipment for 15 other countries. In addition, British engine designs are in use in both the United States and Russia.

(The only foreign country committed to an American jet fighter is Canada, which is building a large number—something over 100—North American F-86 Sabres.)

Another fast Red fighter listed by Jane's—also a single-seat single jet—boasts only 500 miles an hour as top speed. According to Jane's, a Russian version of the German gas turbine powers it.

Jane's listed 14 mystery planes in its Russian section. The survey said they are known to exist but information on them is scant. They include:

1. A four-jet medium bomber.
2. Two "Yakovlev Supersonic."
3. A twin-jet monoplane.

HELSINKI, Oct. 6 (AP).—Nearly complete figures from Finland's local government elections today gave the right and center parties the majority of the total vote.

Preliminary figures had previously given them only the majority of seats in city and country councils, while the vote majority had been with the Socialists and Communists.

The change was caused by returns from the Aaland Islands, whose population is Swedish.

With only a dozen small election districts uncounted, preliminary figures issued today gave the right and center parties 742,832 votes as against 706,556 for th Socialists and Communists.

The Agrarians, Conservatives, Liberals and the Swedish People's Party got 51.3 percent of the total vote. The Socialists took 370,995 votes and the Communists 335,561.

Today's figures gave the right and center parties 6734 seats on city and county councils and the leftist parties 5185, of which 2485 were obtained by Communists.

Rearmament Issue Reaches Crisis in Paris

PARIS, Oct. 6 (NYHT).—The issue of rearming West Germany was recognized here today as the gravest difference that has divided Washington and Paris in many years.

Premier Rene Pleven's cabinet met to hear Foreign Minister Robert Schuman on American determination to incorporate German military units in Western defense.

After the meeting, there was no indication that United States insistence had softened French hostility to such a step. One source said he could not envisage a compromise under the present circumstances.

The question of Germans participating in continental defense is to come up the end of this month when the Defense Ministers of the North Atlantic pact states meet.

One basis of the French position is that there can be no decision until the Schuman plan is operative. This project for pooling the coal and steel industries of France, West Germany, Italy, Belgium, Luxembourg and the Netherlands calls on the member states to surrender their armament potential for the common good and for the economic unification of the continent.

Once such cooperation is a constitutional fact, according to the French view, the danger of a rebirth of German militarism, with the Ruhr industries to serve its aggressive aims, will have been lessened.

The dispute is pointed up by the decision of United States Ambassador David K. E. Bruce to fly to Washington Sunday. It is believed that Bruce will tell the Departments of State and National Defense that France is firm in her opposition to German rearmament now.

OEEC Opens Conference On Stemming Inflation

PARIS, Oct. 6 (NYHT).—Western Europe's economic leaders today began preparing a joint plan of action to counter the immediate threats of inflation, shortages and lower living standards stemming from the demands of rearmament.

The council of the Organization for European Economic Cooperation, meeting at the top political level for the first time since the decision was taken to speed Western defense plans, dug into the problem.

A strong warning memorandum prepared by OEEC economists is said to emphasize the urgency of meeting collectively the disruptive economic effects of large-scale defense spending before they result in a scramble by each of the Western European countries to protect itself at the expense of its neighbors.

After several hours of studying the memorandum and the possible lines of action, the council turned the matter over to a working committee to hammer out specific resolutions on which action may be taken Saturday.

Czechs Give 2 'Spies' Life

PRAGUE, Oct. 6 (AP).—Eight persons accused of spying for the British and Americans were convicted today in Brno, Moravia. Two were sentenced to life imprisonment and the rest to terms ranging from 12 to 22 years.

They had been on trial since Tuesday on charges of high treason and espionage. The case led to expulsion from Czechoslovakia of Lawrence Gaze, British vice consul in Bratislava.

Earlier reports said all the defendants had admitted guilt in testimony at a public hearing.

Rudolf J. Hajek, restaurant owner and artisan, and Cenek Koutnik, locksmith, were sent to prison for life.

McCloy Protests

Security Act Seen Hurting W. Germany

FRANKFURT, Oct. 6 (AP).—American authorities in Germany have protested sharply to Washington at being caught flat-footed by a new United States security law which threatens to bar 90 percent of all Germans from entering the United States.

United States High Commissioner John J. McCloy has sent a strong message predicting that literal application of the law—forbidding entry into the United States of any former member of the Nazi Party or its affiliates—would virtually wreck the big program for sending Germans to America to learn democracy.

American officials here are doubly embarrassed because the law, passed over President Truman's veto, hit just as the Allies had decided to integrate West Germany into Western Europe with international equality and to wipe out the stigma of "enemy" by ending the state of war.

American civilians in Germany, too, have joined in the storm of protests. Many have married German girls whose visas are now being held up because they once belonged to the Hitler-sponsored League of German girls.

The law is part of the new anti-subversive bill which also hits at Communists and all other supporters of totalitarian rule.

Messages to Washington have urged speedy interpretation of the law to clarify present generalities and permit continuation of the program to rehabilitate the Germans politically.

Besides the infamous Black Shirt SS, Hitler's Elite Guard, and Brown Shirt SA, the law would hit the Hitler Youth and possibly the German Labor Front, to which nearly all Germans had to belong.

Spy's Sentencing Slate for Oct. 18

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 6 (U.P.).—Harry Gold, 39, Swiss-born biochemist, who pleaded guilty to atomic spying for Russia, will be sentenced here October 18 in Federal Court. The charge could carry the death penalty.

Alfred Dean Slack, who admitted spying with Gold, got 15 years at Greenville, Tenn., two weeks ago.

U. S. Bluntly Warns Soviet On Austrian Disorder Spread

By the United Press

The United States yesterday praised Austria's quick suppression of Communist disturbances in Vienna and warned Russia that any attempt to spread the disorders to the American zone will be put down.

Acting Secretary of State James E. Webb said in a prepared statement that this Government gave its "full support" to the firm action by Austrian authorities.

"The firmness and determination with which the Austrian people have reacted to the recent Communist-inspired disturbances . . . and the prompt and courageous action taken by the Austrian government and police to maintain law and order are heartening . . . to the American people as a whole.

"Needless to say, this Government will take all proper action to fulfill its international commitments with respect to the maintenance of law and order in the area of its responsibility in Austria."

Webb said the four-power occupation agreement charges the Allied commission with responsibility to maintain law and order if the Austrian authorities are unable to do so.

He noted that the agreement authorizes the high commissioners to act independently in their respective zones if the Allied commission—of which Russia is a member—fails to act.

Austrian Communists Reported Badly Split

VIENNA, Oct. 6 (AP).—Reliable sources tonight said Austrian Communists are badly split because of their party's failure in this week's Russian-backed campaign of strike and disruption.

Some informants went so far as to predict that the party's extremists—the ones who wanted to extend the campaign of traffic tieups and building seizures into an all-out putsch—would be purged.

The Communist efforts were sparked by protests against a proposed government wage-price agreement that would raise the cost of living. But the Russians drew the line, apparently, when hard-headed extremists tried to advance the harassment program into an outright putsch.

The general strike, ordered Tuesday midnight, ended last midnight

Unions Back London On Schuman Plan

MARGATE, Eng., Oct. 6 (AP). — The British Labor Party today overwhelmingly approved the government's refusal to pool Britain's coal and steel industries with those of the rest of western Europe under the Schuman plan.

But the party said if a coal-steel pool emerges from current talks among France, Italy, western Germany, Belgium, Holland and Luxembourg, "we shall do our best to cooperate with it where our best interests are concerned."

It was plain during the debate at the party's annual conference that neither Labor leaders nor many of the working men in the party want Britain to be left standing alone on the sidelines if the rest of Europe does unite these major industries.

W. R. Blyton, who came out of a coal mine to win election to Parliament and an appointment to the Council of Europe, said Britain "cannot stand aloof in isolationism." He mentioned fears that sharp competition among coal and steel producers would lead to price cutting and then to wage cutting.

Blyton urged agreement with other European producers on prices, marketing and distribution of coal and steel.

Hugh Dalton, a member of the Cabinet and of the party's executive committee, asserted "We do not intend to let control of the British coal and steel industries go out of British hands."

Nude Maiden Bas-Relief Loses Battle

SANTA FE, N. Mex., Oct. 6 (U.P.). The battle between the artists and the clergymen, or "Is it art or smut?" ended here today.

A nude stone maiden came off a wall of the new State Capitol annex.

Workmen chipped loose the reclining figure of "Miss Fertility" after a four-day battle in which Santa Fe artists contended she was art and clergymen argued she was "suggestive."

The figure was sexless, insisted the artists. The Rev. Robert J. Brown, head of the Santa Fe Ministerial Alliance, and Evangelist Roy B. Aese of Denver asked:

"Why a naked woman? Why not a naked man?"

"Miss Fertility's" bearded sculptor, William Longley, blanched.

"Did you ever hear of Mother Earth?" he shouted.

The nude maiden was done in bas-relief. As a compromise, some one suggested certain parts of her anatomy be draped.

Artist Will Schuster recoiled at the thought, saying it would be "lewd" to put a brassiere on a work of art.

A Wild Chase Yarn Is Hard on Ticker

By Richard L. Coe

YOUR BLOOD-PRESSURE will rise almost as soon as the Palace's "Union Station" gets under way, and though it will slip back to normal several times, there's every reason to conclude that the heart specialists should profit from this one.

It's a chase yarn from the start—a young girl notes two suspicious characters on a train, one carrying a rod. She reports same to the top detective of the big city station and it turns out her boss' blind daughter has been kidnaped.

And away we go, dashing in and out of elevated trains, chasing through the stockyards, watching one suspicious thug get trampled to death by a herd of cattle; picking up another to see him frightened out of his silence by a novel third-degree method (the cops threaten to toss him in front of an express: "Make it look like suicide" is the order), and finally to the blind girl herself, trapped by the villain in an underground railway where every minute she seems about to steady herself on the live wire.

Unfortunately, there's a bit of padding in all this, pushing the running time up to the required program pattern. So we also get the genuflexions toward young love between the top detective and his pretty informant and a few philosophical wheeze out of Barry Fitzgerald which are wildly extraneous to the thoroughgoing chase yarn at hand. Nor are we spared the consistent California belief that (1) people don't trust cops and (2) that cops are such oafs that, for the final chase, only the hero-cop is able to battle it out with the villain.

All these knee-bends toward the tried-and-true make moments of "Union Station" pretty ridiculous, but when the boys are chasing around the luggage locker of the station or just physically chasing each other, it's pretty exciting stuff.

William Holden is fine as the copper who thinks of the station as his private preserve; head copper of a station is a job you may never have thought of before watching "Union Station," but the next time you're in ours, you'll probably feel you're being tailed all the way from the carstop to the upper berth.

None of the players, however, is so important as the director, Rudolph Mate. While one wishes he'd chucked out a few pages of Sydney Boehm's script, most of the time Mate is keeping his cameras rattling along and at nifty angles. As much as anyone, it is Director Mate whose machinations will ruin your manicured digits.

THE GAYETY'S bookings continue, as they say, apace . . . Set to follow "The Relapse" is "Lend an Ear," which opens a two-week run November 6 . . . This is the cheerfully biting little revue which did more than anything else to revive respect for the intimate type of musical revue . . . "The Consul." Gian-Carlo Menotti's opera now in its final five New York weeks, is booked for the two weeks starting December 4, after which comes the superb "Lost in the Stars," now surprising everyone by doing sensational business on the Western road . . . "Come back, Little Sheba" will arrive January 15 and there's even a date set now for the Lunts . . . America's favorite acting couple will be holding forth in "I Know My Love" starting March 12.

JAN STRUTHER'S bound this way for a visit with her old friends, Jack and Hope Patterson, and to show her son Jamie about the town . . . Dja know where Jan got that name . . . Her two christened names are Joyce Ann and she signed her first pieces J. Ann, which gradually contracted into a name almost as publicly individual as Tallulah.

THE PIX revives "All Quiet on the Western Front" today, with its last 12:50 ayem showing making the surest bet for the late owls . . . Dwight Fiske, his piano and songs, seetled down last night for a stay in the Old New Orleans supper club . . . James Butcher, the Howard U. drama man, settled down after an eventful teaching and touring stay in Europe . . . Arena Stage tomorrow afternoon at 5 plays host to a public visit sponsored by the arts committee of the Washington branch of the AAUW.

MARGUERITE: Nelly Corradi, above, acts Gounod's pallid heroine in the Italian film version of "Faust," now on the Plaza screen. Onelia Finechi's voice, though, sings the melodic score

"UNION STATION", a Paramount release, produced by Jules Schermer, directed by Rudolph Mate, screen play by Sydney Boehm from a story by Thomas Walsh. At the Palace.

WASHINGTON'S FINEST "CLOSE-IN" SALT WATER DEVELOPMENT
AN OPPORTUNITY TO BUY A BEAUTIFUL WOODED COTTAGE SITE

Cape Loch Haven is a vacation land for people who seek a change from overcrowded resorts to surroundings in which they can relax and enjoy their own sports and summer activities. It has a special appeal for the family who wants to enjoy a desirable cottage site, and yet keep it well within their budget.

Cape Loch Haven offers healthful, life-giving tonic for children and all the family in the pungent scent of verdant woodlands, combined with sparkling sunshine and the tang of invigorating salt air. Cape Loch Haven offers excellent boating, bathing and fishing. Crabs and oysters are abundant. Excellent boat harbors.

Cape Loch Haven invites you to drive down and see for yourself how this cape fits your every need. It is hard to realize that there is a haven of rest and relaxation so close to Washington which may be reached by a short, pleasant drive over scenic and well-paved, wide highways for easy commuting.

Health Setup Formed For A-Bomb Attack

District officials and private medical men made a start yesterday at setting up a civil defense "Medical and Health Division."

The division would care for the wounded and guard public health following an atomic bomb attack.

Some 35 representatives of the District Government, medical societies, Red Cross and other groups met at the District Building and agreed on the following organizational form:

The division will be headed by Dr. Daniel L. Seckinger, District director of public health. He will rank as a deputy director in the over-all city defense setup. Under him will be a physician, to be named later, in charge of medical care, and William H. Cary, jr., District director of public health engineering, who will head a public health group.

Details such as where the division will have its headquarters and emergency casualty stations and how much money and personnel will be needed, are still to be worked out.

Dr. John B. Ross, Washington physician, gave an indication of the size of the job when he said it would cost about $500,000 to process the 50,000 pints of blood plasma needed here to cope with an atomic attack. And the need for whole blood, requiring on-the-spot donations, would be even greater, he said.

District Engineer Commissioner Gordon R. Young asked that estimates of money needs be submitted within a month so they can be included in the District's 1952 budget requests.

The physicians talked more in terms of the metropolitan area than of the District alone. Contact between city and suburbs must continue on an informal basis until October 17, however, when area officials will meet at the District Building to discuss mutual aid.

Medical societies are ahead of Government in this respect. Theodore Wiprus, executive secretary of the District Medical Society, said they have formed an area-wide committee to list available physicians.

Meanwhile, the United States Conference of Mayors concluded its two-day meeting here on civil defense.

The mayors were told by Paul V. Betters, executive director of their group, that it was "more or less useless to discuss many phases" of the problem until Congress returns in November and acts on civil defense.

James J. Wadsworth, acting head of the National Security Resources Board's civil defense unit, agreed with Betters' prediction that President Truman will shortly set up, by executive order, a national civil defense office. The President announced his intention some time ago, but it is understood he has yet to find a man to run the agency.

The mayors voted a resolution of thanks to NSRB for what that agency was able to tell them. But before they did so, Detroit's Mayor Albert Cobo said he intended to go home and tell his people no crisis is "imminent," and he thought NSRB should say so too "so our people will know."

American-Built
1068-Mile Arabian Oil Pipeline Laid

BEIRUT, Oct. 6 (AP).—The 1068-mile oil pipeline from the American-owned fields on the Persian Gulf in Saudi Arabia to the ancient town of Sidon on the Mediterranean coast has been completed and now is being filled with oil, trade sources said today.

It was built to eliminate a 7000-mile tanker haul through the Suez Canal.

The Trans-Arabian Pipeline Co., which will operate the line for the Arabian American Oil Co., has made no official announcement of its completion. But reliable sources said eastern and western segments were joined in Hashemite Jordan two weeks ago.

These sources said that with completion of pumping stations, loading of tankers off Sidon is expected to begin within two months.

The American-built line cost an estimated 250 million dollars and took 323,000 tons of steel. It taps one of the world's greatest oil fields, now producing at record rates.

Trade sources said a possible hitch was developing in a second major Middle East oil line projected from the Kirkuk fields in Iraq of the British-controlled Iraq Petroleum Co. American interests own one fourth of this firm.

Qualified informants say steel allocations being discussed in Washington may hold up building of the 600-mile line to Banyas on the Syrian coast.

Pearson Scored For Saying Steel Scrap Cost Jumped

A statement by Columnist Drew Pearson that steel scrap was among the first items to "skyrocket" after Korea was denied yesterday by Walter S. J. Swanson, public relations director, Institute of Scrap Iron & Steel, Inc., Washington.

In stressing that Pearson "recklessly attacked the patriotism of a basic industry that deserves praise, Swanson added:

"It is a fact, easily checked by Mr. Pearson were he to take the trouble, that from the month before Korea to the present time there has been no significant change in general iron and steel scrap prices, and in fact, there has been a decrease in the Bellwether grade."

Red Tank Column Moving Southward

chon, 32 miles southeast of the big east coast port of Wonsan.

The South Korean Capital Division was operating in North Korea between the Sixth and Third. Latest field dispattches said elements of the Capital and Sixth Divisions had occupied the villages of Yongdae and Inje in the rugged mountains east of Hwachon.

All three South Korean divisions were reported advancing against light opposition.

Leading elements of the Third padded a dusty 20 miles Friday up the east coast highway in their drive on Wonsan, a bomb-blasted industrial center but still one of the best natural harbors on the east coast.

Prisoners taken by the Third in its week-old 75-mile push from the thirty-eighth parallel said Red troops would put up a fight at Wonsan, or on its outskirts. The prisoners said they heard that Russian advisers were helping to prepare fortifications at Wonsan.

South Korean intelligence reports said there was a regiment of Reds waiting for the South Korean Third somewhere on the road between Tongchon and Wonsan.

The Sixth Division apparently had no trouble reaching Hwachon. The nearest Red force of any size was reported 20 air miles northwest—and still fleeing northward. South Korean reports said the Red unit had 10 tanks, 24 artillery pieces and 30 trucks.

The hydro-electric plant at Hwachon, seventh largest in Korea, supplied power to the Korean capital of Seoul in prewar days. The city, on the Pukhan River, is built on the western edge of a huge mountain-walled reservoir.

Surrender Demand Ignored

MacArthur's Tokyo headquarters said Friday the Red army had suffered 200,000 casualties since its June 25 invasion of South Korea.

Of the total, 40,000 were listed as prisoners of the Allies. The other casualty figures, headquarters said, may include some duplications. This meant that one man could have been counted as two casualties if he had been wounded, removed from action, sent back to the front, then wounded and removed from the fighting line a second time.

The headquarters compilation did not list the number of Reds killed.

Last week, Lieut. Gen. Walton H. Walker, commander of the United States Eighth Army, put that figure at 75,000 in South Korea.

MacArthur's headquarters said the total of 200,000 killed wounded and captured did not include civilians killed or wounded in the fighting or in air raids.

Supply Columns Roll South

There were many indications that the remainder of the Red army would make a stand. Supply convoys have been reported rolling into North Korea from Manchuria. One was reported heading eastward toward Wonsan. Other supply caravans were spotted on roads leading south from the northern capital of Pyongyang totward the thirty-eighth parallel border.

Allied planes blasted at these by daylight and by flare-light after dark.

Other Red supply lines on both coasts were being lambasted from the sea by American, British, Australian, Canadian and French warships operating in dangerously mined waters.

While the Reds hastily built up defenses at several points in the north, the bulk of the United Nations forces—about 175,000 men—continued their build-up south of the thirty-eighth parallel.

American Marines and the United States Seventh Division continued advances north from Uijonbu, captured Red communications hub 12 miles north of Seoul. The American units in this sector were about 15 miles south of the border and out of contact with the enemy, which has scampered back across the boundary into North Korea.

On the east coast, Col. Frederick C. Gray, jr., of Roanoke, Tex., commander of the United States Thirty-fifth Fighter-Bomber Group, took command of the reactivated Pohang airstrip.

The field was abandoned as an operational base several weeks ago after the port city of Pohang was captured by Reds.

The airstrip, 6 miles south west of Pohang, was never won by the Reds, but their artillery firepower made it useless until they were driven away in the Allied offensive that began September 15.

With Pohang airstrip back in operation, the Allies have a closer base from which to support the three South Korean divisions across the border.

The Fifth Air Force announced that planes, presumably from Pohang, attacked Reds near the Manchurian border Friday "making it possible for United Nations ground forces to rapidly reorganize all along the west and central portion of central Korea, just south of the thirty-eighth parallel."

Deferment Plan Backed

the civilian counterpart of the military ROTC program."

The committees, headed by Dr. M. H. Trytten, of the National Research Council, discussed and studied the problem of student deferment for two years. The report urged the policies be adopted at once, and that local draft boards receive necessary instructions to make the recommendations effective.

The committees' report pointed out that the plan is intended "to protect the national interest by providing for the further training of those students whose potential ability is attested by a superior score on a general aptitude test, and whose educational progress to date is established by a superior academic record." The report emphasized:

"No attempt is made to designate any specific college curriculum or graduate program of instruction as essential or as warranting consideration over and above that given any other curriculum."

Under the plan, all students would be given individual deferment on the basis of the need for continuing his training to increase his potential value to the national health, safety, and interest.

To be eligible for deferment, the student would have to pass a general test, for the present—as suggested by the committee—score 120 or above in the Army general classification test.

A high school student would also have to show his scholastic record makes him acceptable for admission to an accredited college. A college freshman must end the year within the top half of his class, a sophomore in the top third, a junior in the top 25 percent, a senior in the top half.

U. S., Britain Vow Containment of Korea War

ted to live its own life without foreign interference, the better.

"We want nothing from Korea," Austin said. "We want no bases there. We do not want to and will not threaten any other country through the temporary presence of American troops in Korea on a United Nations mission."

While the Assembly debated, South Korean troops advanced deeper into Communist North Korea but United States and other troops under the U. N. banner remained south of the thirty-eighth parallel, border dividing North and South Korea.

The Assembly rejected a Soviet Union motion to invite North Koreans here to take part in discussions of the Korean issue. There were six votes in favor, 41 against, and six abstentions.

The eight-nation plan was approved by the Assembly's political committee. By a vote of 47 to 7, more than enough to overcome the two-thirds vote barrier in the Assembly.

The plan calls for a reorganized U. N. commission on Korea to conduct elections and take necessary steps for setting up a unified, independent Korean government. U. N. forces will remain in Korea long enough for the commission to carry out its assignment. The plan also calls for immediate steps for rehabilitating the country.

Red Request "Naive"

The Russians offered in the Political Committee a resolution calling for immediate cessation of hostilities and for withdrawal of all foreign troops. It also called for all-Korean elections to be run by representatives of the North and South governments with a U. N. commission observing it. Not a member of the U. N., would participate in this U. N. commission under the Soviet bloc plan. The plan was defeated in the Political Committee but was reintroduced here today.

Stefan Wierblowski, Poland, the first speaker today, supported the Russian ideas and in fact introduced the Soviet bloc resolution again.

Wierblowski repeated Soviet assertions that the war in Korea was a civil conflict. He said the United States actually wanted to continue to occupy Korea and establish "new strategic bases."

Foreign Secretary Carlos P. Romulo, the Phillipines, called the Soviet bloc for withdrawal of foreign troops "naive" and said it could not be considered seriously in view of the true situation in Korea. He said the world should take cognizance of the "realities—not the fantasies" of the actual situation and said this had been done in the eight-power plan approved by the political committee.

U. S. Again Postpones Bread Regulations

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

The Food and Drug Administration yesterday postponed, for the second time, putting into effect its highly controversial regulations setting up standards for bread.

The new order gives opponents of the regulations until November 7 to file objections. Chief objector is the Cooperative League of the United States, which calls the rules unfair to its "Triple-Rich" bread.

This bread was developed by Dr. Clive M. McKay of Cornell University, wartime Navy chief nutritionist. It not only is distributed by the Coop. League, but is served to New York State mental institutions and school lunch programs in New York City, Baltimore and other cities.

Under the new regulations Triple-Rich bread must be called "soy bread" instead of white bread since white bread must not contain more than three percent soy flour, and Triple-Rich contains six percent. A loaf must weigh, after cooling, one-half pound or more; anything less must be called a roll or bun.

Sets Bread, Roll Standards

The regulations set standards for all types of white, whole wheat and cracked wheat breads, buns and rolls. By not including certain chemicals known as softeners, designed to keep bread apparently fresh for several days, FDA has in effect barred their use.

Other provisions are:

1. All white breads must be yeast-leavened, kneaded, and contain flour, salt and some moistening ingredient, either milk or water. Optional ingredients include shortening, milk, buttermilk, eggs, sugar, malt syrup, inactive dried yeast, harmless lactic-acid producing bacteria, and not more than 3 percent of corn flour or fine corn meal, potato flour, rice flour, wheat starch, cornstarch, milo starch, potato starch, sweet potato starch or any combination of any two. Or it may contain .0075 part of potassium bromate, potassium calcium, etc., lactic acid, or a small amount of vinegar, spice or spice oil or extract.

2. To be labeled "enriched bread" the product must contain prescribed amounts of thiamin, riboflavin, niasinamide and iron. It may contain, as an optional added ingredient, a fixed amount of vitamin D, harmless salts or wheat germ.

3. Milk bread is bread that uses milk as its sole moistening ingredient, and must contain at least 8.2 percent of its weight in milk. The not-fat solids of the milk must not be less than 1.2 times the milk fat nor more than 2.3 times.

Raisin Bread Defined

4. Raisin bread must contain half as much raisins by weight as flour. They may be iced or frosted.

5. Whole wheat bread, or entire wheat bread or graham bread must be made entirely of whole wheat flour. No white flour may be included.

6. Bread made of combinations of whole or cracked wheat and white flour must be so labeled.

7. Unsalted bread must conform to white bread regulations except that it contains no salt.

The order setting up the new regulations was originally issued August 8 to become effective August 23. This was first postponed until October 9, and now until November 8.

The FDA has not taken any action towards setting standards for other breads, such as rye, pumpernickel, etc. It will not until either the bakery trade, consumer groups or other bodies request it.

U. S. Readies Note

Britain Soon To Get Data On Arms Aid

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

The State Department is finishing a note, soon to be delivered to the British Embassy, setting forth the extent of American dollar aid to the first stages of the expanded British defense program.

The note is said to spell out how the United States, with Mutual Defense Assistance Program funds, will help Britain finance the "dollar component" for the first, short-range installments of its rearmament effort.

The dollar aid will be used to help Britain buy the raw materials, parts and components needed for those new defense projects now under way or about to be started.

Officials said that, contrary to some reports here and in London, the note does not reject any British proposals relating to long-term American economic help. It represents, rather, a British-American agreement that the problem be tackled now is the interim, or immediate one.

Financial Help to Wait

The longer-term problem of financial help to the United Kingdom and other Western European nations in the Atlantic Pact, is not expected to be solved for some months. Officials point out this must be done on a multilateral basis and after all the nations' military expansion plans are analyzed.

At that time, consideration will be given to the aid this country can afford to prevent the rearmament programs from cutting intolerably into the economies of those countries.

Some of the financing the United States will give Britain for its current military projects will be in the form of authorizations to purchase materials and components in this country and the dollar area. Some direct dollar aid will be given for buying military production necessities in other "hard currency" areas.

Britain to Sell Us Arms

In addition, Britain will be allowed to earn some of the dollars it needs by producing munitions which the United States will buy, with MDAP money, for distribution to the several Atlantic Pact countries.

With respect to a British proposal for long-term aid, the United States has already let the British Embassy know it considers the assistance requested to be excessive. Britain had asked that about half the cost of its increased armament program be defrayed by America.

The pending note is also reported to say that at this stage, the United States cannot give Britain dollars that would find their way into its reserve of dollars and gold. This may be necessary at a later date, to meet mounting British liabilities elsewhere caused by defense expansion, but it is not within the range of immediate problems to be considered.

White House Repairs Go Ahead on Schedule

Harris & Ewing

RENOVATION—The east end of the first floor of the White House, showing the newly poured concrete floor, in place and All steel beams and joists are wall partitions will go up soon

The top-to-bottom renovation of the White House probably will yield about half a million souvenir pieces—bits of wood, brick and the like.

That was the best guess yesterday of Maj. Gen. Glen E. Edgerton, executive director of the Commission on Renovation of the Executive Mansion.

The general and his commission colleagues have been wrestling with the souvenir problem for months. They expect to announce a firm policy shortly.

"But we are thinking along these lines," Edgerton said after conducting reporters and photographers on another check on the progress of the $5,400,000 reconstruction job.

"I think this job will supply about half a million pieces of wood, brick and stone," he said, adding that a recent poll of Congressmen indicated the demand from constituents was for 30,000 to 40,000 pieces.

The general said the souvenirs "probably" would be distributed on an area-quota basis "to make sure the people in and close to Washington won't get all the best stuff."

The bulk of the distribution is expected to be handled through Congressmen's offices, he said, and it may begin in the next few weeks.

The White House custodians are thinking of charging a nominal fee to cover handling expenses, how much no one seems to know.

Edgerton disclosed another proposal of interest to souvenir fans with this observation.

"We are not in the retail souvenir business. A person simply cannot request a 4-inch piece of wood from the President's bedroom and expect to get it," he explained.

"But we are thinking of giving (or selling as the case may be) souvenirs in kits. For instance a person would be offered two stones of similar shape which could be used as bookends. We might offer an organization enough brick to face a fireplace. Or we might give two sticks of wood which could be fashioned into a gavel."

As for overall job progress, Edgerton says work is 31 percent complete, exactly on schedule, and President Truman should be in his rebuilt home a year from this December.

Yesterday reporters saw a dirty outer shell, which is to be left intact, and inside a maze of steel framework which is just about completed.

But the excavation work on the east side near the Treasury Building caused the big excitement.

"It that big hole for a bigger and better bomb shelter?" a reporter asked.

Edgerton said no, the space was for heating and air-conditioning equipment and other utility purposes.

Pressed again about "bomb shelters," Edgerton said "some changes are being made in the underground connections with the Treasury Department . . . but the words 'bomb shelter' are not in my vocabulary."

District Police Again Told of Courtesy Policy

The Metropolitan Police Department yesterday re-issued its statement on a policy of courtesy from all police officers.

Assistant Superintendent Walter T. Storm, executive officer, issued the statement as a general order, reminding members of the force that the department "has insisted on courtesy on the part of its personnel with a view to bringing about a closer and more pleasant relationship with the public through courteous treatment of citizens."

The statement outlines the general elements of courteous treatment and the policy to be followed in issuing traffic violation notices to motorists in lieu of summary arrest.

Truman Trip To End Today

ABOARD YACHT COMMANDER, Potomac River, Oct. 6 (AP).—President Truman spent the last full day of his fall vacation under a fair October sky and on waters which scarcely swayed the yacht Williamsburg.

The Williamsburg was anchored tonight off Blakiston Island. It is scheduled to get under way about 8:30 a. m. (EST) tomorrow and arrive at the Washington Naval Gun Factory about 3 or 3:30 p. m.

Press Secretary Charles G. Ross said Mr. Truman plans to go directly to his White House office. Ross said, however, he knows of no pressing business awaiting the President other than routine affairs.

The President and his staff lunched on oysters freshly tonged from the river bed. Ross said the bivalves, served fried and on the half shell, provided a "wonderful" meal.

Lodge Opposes U. S. Parley With Stalin at This Time

NEW YORK, Oct. 6 (AP)—Senator Lodge (R., Mass.) today opposed any American talks with Premier Stalin until the free world has rebuilt its strength and "can meet him on a basis of equality."

Lodge is a member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and a U. N. delegate. The Associated Press asked him for comment on the request made to Stalin by Harold E. Stassen, former aspirant for the Republican presidential nomination, for a meeting between Stalin and a group of Americans, including Stassen.

"The hope for peace is the first thought in our minds," Lodge said. "There is always a possibility of good results from conversations with a chief of state in which the conversation is on a basis of man-to-man equality. But it is better to have no meeting at all than to have one in which the chief of state is in a bullying frame of mind and mistakes our humanity for weakness.

"The brutal Soviet provocation in Korea forces the conclusion that this is not the time to seek an interview with Premier Stalin. It seems wiser to wait until the free world has rebuilt its strength and can meet him on a basis of equality. It should be possible for the free world to develop this strength in from three to five years.

"Until then, the suggested interview would, for two reasons, incur the danger of further Soviet aggression. First, it would encourage the Soviets to believe that we are not as strong as we actually are. Secondly, the interview would create a belief in this country that the military danger was virtually ended. This might result in a slackening of our own effort to rebuild military strength. Any slackening of this effort at this time would be fraught with disaster."

Church Plans Battle On 'Mad War Trend'

DES MOINES, Iowa, Oct. 6 (U.P.). A program of action to reverse "the mad trend toward a third world war" was submitted today to the seventeenth biennial convention of the United Lutheran Church in America.

The Board of Social Missions outlined the program, which included economic development of backward countries and other measures.

Russia and its statellites are the major obstacle to peace, the board said, but Americans should "recognize penitently our own shortcomings" and take steps to correct them.

The report highlighted the third day of the nine-day meeting after the delegates voted overwhelmingly to enter a proposed new national church council.

The Board of Social Missions asked individuals to avoid hysteria and "self-righteousness and hatred which give impulse to the monstrosity of a holy war."

Then it presented a four-point program calling on the Government to "press forward with a program of economic development of those countries where such assistance is needed," since "Soviet communism finds an open door in areas of economic deficiency."

Pray Continuously

Nuns to Mark 50th Birthday Of Convent

The fiftieth anniversary of the opening of the Religious of Perpetual Adoration Convent and chapel, at 1419 V st. nw., will be observed Tuesday with special ceremonies.

The order consists of a semi-cloistered congregation of sisters who pray continuously before the Blessed Sacrament for world peace, and for the welfare of Church, Nation, family and friends.

They also make vestments and other religious articles for poor churches, give retreats for women and instruct young children in their catechism.

This is the only establishment of the order in the United States.

Special religious services for the golden jubilee include a solemn pontifical mass at 10 a. m. Tuesday to be celebrated by the Most Rev. John M. McNamara, auxiliary bishop of Washington, and an address at 4:30 p. m. by the Most Rev. Patrick A. O'Boyle, Archbishop of Washington.

Churches To Participate In Freedom Crusade

Hundreds of churches in the Washington area will join in the Crusade for Freedom, the spiritual offensive to combat Communist propaganda, by observing Freedom Sunday.

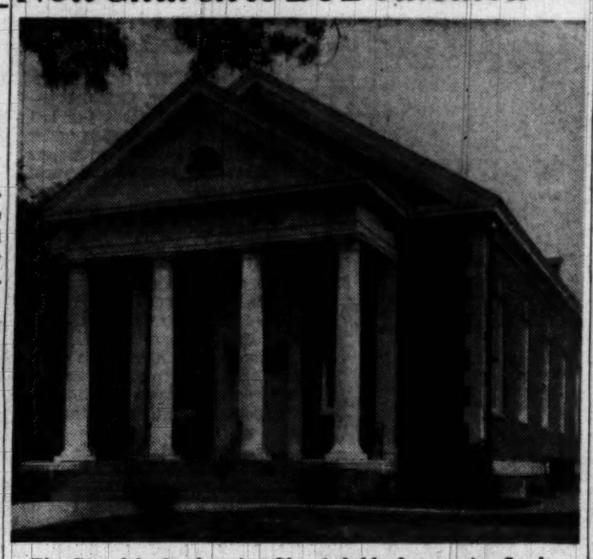
At many churches, tables will be set up both before and after services so members may sign the Freedom Scroll and make voluntary contributions to help Radio Free America.

Adventists to Open New Church

Dedication services for the $23,000 Damascus Seventh-Day Adventist Church will take place at 11 a. m. today at Etcheson and Damascus rds., western Montgomery County.

Elder Charles Soles, minister, said the dedicatory sermon will be preached by Elder Dan B. Ochs, president of the Columbia Union of Adventists, and the dedicatory prayer will be given by Elder Howard J. Detwiller, president of the Potomac Conference.

New Church to Be Dedicated



The Riverdale Presbyterian Church holds first service Sunday

Presbyterians to Dedicate $190,000 Church at Riverdale

The congregation of the new Riverdale Presbyterian Church will hold its first service in the building, 6513 Queens Chapel rd., University Park, Md., Sunday at 11 a. m.

The new church is a brick and stone structure of Colonial design, containing, besides a spacious sanctuary, a large fellowship hall with kitchen facilities and classroom space. The building cost $190,000.

The opening sermon, "With Banners Flying," will be preached by the Rev. W. Keith Curtis, minister.

At 4 p. m. there will be a special dedication service with the sermon delivered by the Rev. R. Paul Schearrer, minister of the Takoma Park Presbyterian Church. The invocation will be given by the Rev. Isaac Steenson, moderator of the Washington City Presbytery, and the scripture will be read jointly by the Rev. D. Hobart Evans, minister of the Hyattsville Presbyterian Church and the Rev. Ralph Merker, general presbyter of Washington City Presbytery. The Rev. Edward Kidder, minister of the Berwyn Presbyterian Church will pronounce the benediction.

One part of the service will be devoted to the "ceremony of the keys" in which Dr. Joseph S. Caldwell, chairman of the building committee and Arthur A. Seidenspinner, chairman of the board of trustees, will take part. At the close of the service there will be a prayer of dedication by Mr. Custis.

A series of special events planned for dedication week will commence with a home-coming dinner to be held at the church Tuesday evening at 6:30 p. m. All former members of the church are invited as guests to enjoy a dinner followed by an evening of fellowship and entertainment. On Friday at 7 p. m., the children of the church from nursery age up are invited to attend a children's service planned to acquaint them with the new building.

Ethical Society To Hear Talk on Civil Liberties

The second of a series on "Foundations of the Democratic Faith" will be delivered by E. Raymond Wilson, chairman of the National Civil Liberties Clearing House, Sunday at the 11 a. m. meeting of the Washington Ethical Society.

Wilson, also director of the Friends Committee on National Legislation, will talk at Barker Hall YWCA, 17th and K sts. nw., on "The Right to Differ."

He will discuss the pressures for a changing pattern in the citizen's constitutional rights when it comes to the question of political assent.

Universalist Lay Leaders To Meet Here

Several hundred Universalist lay leaders from 16 States and the District will gather at the National Memorial Universalist Church, 1810 16th st. nw., for a conference, October 12-15.

Its theme will be, "The Function of a Free Church."

Admiral Harold A. Houser, USN, will be toastmaster at a joint banquet session next Saturday, at which Lowell B. Mason, member of the Federal Trade Commission, will speak on "The Meaning of Liberal Christianity for Times Like These."

Special speakers at the laywomen's session will include the Rev. Henry F. Helmolz, Rochester, Minn., chief consultant of the Mid-Century White House Conference on Children and Youth, and Mrs. Harold A. Stone, 1051 26th rd., S. Arlington, former national president of the League of Women Voters. Dr. Helmholz will speak Friday at 7 p. m.; Mrs. Stone, Friday at 1:30 p. m.

Mrs. Cyrus Springall, of Malden, Mass., national president of the Association of Universalist Women, and holder of the prized diabetic medal "For Prolonging Life's Span After the Onset of Diabetes," will also speak.

Delegates will hear reports of the denomination's Service Committee's new work in Japan and Germany. Since the close of the war, the Service Committee has maintained four homes for displaced children of 11 different nations in the British zone of Germany.

The Service Committee is expected to ask the laity to support a new work of caring for some of the 14 million refugees now living in the Western ones, and for assistance in the new work in Japan which will center on the rehabilitation problems of children.

Dedication Service Set for Sunday School Teachers

Sunday school teachers from 90 parishes of the Episcopal Diocese of Washington will attend a special service of dedication at Washington Cathedral Sunday at 4 p. m. Dean John Wallace Suter will preach.

Canon Charles Martin, headmaster of St. Albans School, has arranged the service with a new litany of dedication.

The Sunday schools of all Episcopal churches have now reopened after a summer recess. Last year there were 1258 teachers and 10,953 pupils enrolled in these schools.

Prayers for Leprosy Work Asked by American Missions

Observance of next week as a period of prayer for leprosy missions has been asked by leaders of American Leprosy Missions, heralding the forty-third annual convention of the group to be held at Calvary Baptist Church, 8th and H sts. nw., October 18-20 . . . Homer Rodeheaver — the gospel singer who will be a feature of the Sunday afternoon sixty-sixth anniversary celebration of the Central Union Mission—will conduct the 11 a. m services at Westminister Memorial Church, 434 7th st. sw. Sunday. The colorful evangelist spent 20 years as song leader for Billy Sunday, and celebrated his seventieth birthday last Wednesday . . . The Rev John F. Stevens says his St. Patrick's (Episcopal) Church, 4465 Greenwich pkwy, nw., is the only non-Roman Catholic church in the country by that name . . . Hamline Methodist Church, 1612 and Allison sts. nw., will be minus its minister, the Rev. J. A. Leatherman and a score of key laymen this weekend. The groups will be holding the church's first retreat at Capon Springs, W. Va. . . . The second fall festival of the supermodern St. Clement's Church, 1701 Seminary rd., Alexandria, will be held this weekend.

Rodeheaver

The Rev. Ira S. Ernst begins his tenth year as pastor of the Memorial Evangelical United Bretheren Church, 1700 N. Capitol st., Sunday. His anniversary topic at 11 a. m. will be "Christian Road Builders." . . . A discussion of racial problems in Washington housing will feature a dinner meeting of the Washington Fellowship, interracial and interfaith organization, next Thursday at 6:30 p. m. in Calvary Baptist Church, 8th and H sts. nw. Participants will include John Ihlder, executive officer of the National Capital Housing Authority; Hilda Cloud, executive secretary of the Washington Housing Association; and Sanford Bolz, an authority on restrictive covenants . . . The First Presbyterian Church of Newport News, second largest congregation in the Synod of Virginia, celebrates he golden anniversary of its dedication Sunday.

Dr. Ernst

The Rev. Clovis G. Chappell—who is currently filling in at Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church—doesn't know what it means "to retire." The famed pastor "retired" from the active ministery a year ago, and has only preached some 300 sermons since then . . . Bishop Marvin A. Franklin, of Jackson, Miss., speaking to laymen in the Methodist Board of Lay Activities, said there are four types of church members: (1) tired laymen; (2) retired laymen; (3) tiresome laymen; and (4) tireless laymen . . . The moon cakes consumed at the annual Chinese Community Church observance of the "Moon Festival" are to Chinese celebrating the first full moon of the autumn what pumpkin pie is to Americans at Thanksgiving.

Dr. Paul Geren, internationally known Christian leader, will be guest speaker at Petworth Baptist Church, 557 Randolph st. nw. at 11 a. m. ("Christ's Demands on Laymen") and 8 p. m. ("The Christian Missionary Enterprise in India"). At present working with the Diplomatic Corps of Foreign Service, he was associated with Dr. Gordon S. Seagrave, world famed Burma surgeon, now imprisoned by the Burmese authorities and being held for his life on the charge of treason. Doctor Geren walked out of Burma in the famous trek made by Stilwell's men.

Dr. Seagrave

The Rev. J. Warren Hastings will be one of the featured speakers at the International Convention of the Disciples of Christ in Oklahoma City, October 9-15. More than 8000 are expected to attend and hear the minister of the National City Christian Church. The Rev. George Bolton, superintendent of the Christian Herald Bowery Mission in N. Y. C., will occupy his pulpit at the 10:50 services Sunday . . . W. Frank Gatewood, local advertising manager of the Times-Herald, will serve as public relations director of the Washington Cathedral annual sustaining and building fund campaign . . . The Rev. Luther D. Miller, canon at Washington Cathedral, will be one of the speakers in a 2-day forum which will be held at Christ (Methodist) Church in New York next week . . . Mrs. Idris Jones, who will lead the "Discovery Group" on "The Family Lives its Religion," Sunday at 6 p. m. at Calvary Baptist Church, 8th and H sts. nw., is well-qualified too for the position. She is the mother of four children.

Stated Meeting Scheduled

The October stated meeting of the Presbytery of Washington City will be held in the Clarendon Church, N. Jackson and N. Irving sts., Arlington, Tuesday at 1:30 p. m.

New Council To Be Topic At Luncheon

Washington church leaders will get an advance picture of the organization and program of the new National Council of the Churches of Christ in the United States at a luncheon meeting Tuesday.

Dr. Adams

Dr. Earl Adams, executive secretary of the planning commission for the NCC, will interpret the work of the council to be constituted at Cleveland the last of November.

Four national inter-denominational bodies are merging to form the new organization.

They are: the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, the Foreign Missions Conference of North America, the Home Missions Council of North America, the International Council of Religious Education, the Missionary Education Movement of the United States and Canada, the National Protestant Council on Higher Education, the United Council of Church Women, and the United Stewardship Council.

The meeting, at 12:15 p. m. in the Calvary Baptist Church, 8th and H sts. nw., is sponsored by the Washington Federation of Churches and the Washington Council of Church Women. Mrs. Clarence T. Nason is chairman of the luncheon committee, and Dr. Clarence W. Cranford, president of the Washington Federation of Churches will preside.

Bishop to Lay Cornerstone in Bethesda Rites

The cornerstone of the new Our Lady of Lourdes Catholic Church, 4501 East-West hwy., Bethesda, will be laid at 4 p. m., Sunday, by the Most Rev. John M. McNamara, auxiliary bishop of Washington.

Delegates from parish organizations and from Our Lady of Lourdes School will be among those attending the ceremonies. The Rev. Elmer T. Fisher, pastor of Our Lady of Lourdes Church, will preside.

The new church is a contemporary brick structure, and with its furnishings is expected to cost about $400,000. It will seat more than 1000 persons, and will be completed early next year.

Father Fisher, a native Washingtonian, has been pastor of the church since 1945. His assistants are the Rev. John T. Sweeney and the Rev. Gerard A. McWilliams. The parish was founded in 1926 and now has more than 4500 parishioners.

Radio Preachers

The Arlington Church of the Air, sponsored by the Arlington Ministerial Union, will feature the Rev. Isaac Steenson, of Clarendon Presbyterian Church, from 11 a. m. to noon on WARL; and the Rev. Glendale Burton, of Wilson Boulevard Christian Church, from 11:30 to noon on WEAM.

Men Get New Start At Central Mission

The Central Union Mission is a place where down-and-outers can get a bed, showers, fumigation, meals and religion.

It is also a place where many broke and dejected men can get a new start in life.

"Most men who come here have sunk lower than low," Dr. Herbert E. Eberhardt, the superintendent, said. "We have a saying here that you have to reach up to touch bottom."

Those who can afford pay $1 a night; others, nothing.

"We'd rather give a free bed than have a panhandler pay a few coins and feel he owns the place," Dr. Eberhardt explained.

Rise Through Religion

The 58-year-old round-faced, former Indianapolis minister believes the evening religious hour is just as important to his boarders as the shower bath.

"The first step back is through religion," he said. "When a man admits defeat, we can help him. When he decides to become a Christian, he's got a leg on the road back."

What the mission gives about 175 men a night is "basic old-fashioned evangelism and conversion," the director said. "The Gospel services aren't exactly required attendance, but we bring pretty strong moral pressure."

In the past few years, local churches have taken an increasing interest in the mission's work.

Goal 150 Churches

"In 1948, 89 different churches took part in our programs," Dr. Eberhardt said. "Last year 113 different churches participated. This year we are hoping to make it a goal of 150."

In the 113 churches, there were 13 different denominations represented.

Mission headquarters are in a seven-story building at 613 C st. nw., which also houses an emergency home for children. The mission also operates a farm and a camp worth nearly half a million dollars.

Operating expenses last year were a little under $80,000, which came largely from individual contributions.

"We're not in the Community Fund because we feel ours is primarily a religious undertaking," Dr. Eberhardt said.

Although about 100 children are cared for under an emergency basis, the largest part of the mission's work is for homeless men. Last year free lodgings were given to almost 33,000 men; free meals, to 78,000.

Homer Rodeheaver To Conduct Rally Music

On Sunday at 3 p. m. many famous rescue mission leaders and evangelists will help the Central Union Mission observe its sixty-sixth anniversary at Constitution Hall.

Homer Rodeheaver, who trod the sawdust trail with Billy Sunday for two decades, will have charge of the music at the free rally, whose theme is "The Answer to Skid Row."

Among the colorful speakers who will give personal testimony will be the Rev. George L. Bolton, pastor of the noted Christian Herald's Bowery Mission in New York.

Other mission leaders on the program include the Rev. Claude J. Moore, Jamestown, N. Y.; the Rev. Dr. Peter MacFarlane, St. Paul, Minn.; the Rev. Ernest A. Tippett, Bridgeport, Conn.; the Rev. Lawrence Sutherland, Newark, N. J.; the Rev. Mrs. Clemme Ellis White, New York City; Isaac Chase, Hartford, Conn; Clifford S. Hartzell, Philadelphia; the Rev. Thomas J. Hinkin, Saginaw, Mich.; Dr. William Huck, Atlanta, Ga.; Leonard C. Hunt, Indianapolis, Ind.; the Rev. William E. Paul, Minneapolis, Minn., and Clinton H. Tasker, Syracuse, N. Y.

Leading Washington pastors have indorsed the "Skid Row" rally and are cooperating with the Central Union Mission.

As part of the program leading up to the sixty-sixth anniversary celebration, a 40-minute sound movie on "The Church Moves In" will be presented free to the public tonight at 7:45 at mission headquarters.

Mission Tries to Give Needy Men a New Start in Life

EACH EVENING HOUR-LONG RELIGIOUS SERVICES ARE HELD IN THE CHAPEL OF THE CENTRAL UNION MISSION

40 Priests to Take Part in Marian Congress at Monastery

More than 40 prelates and scholars will take part in the Franciscan National Marian Congress which will be held here Sunday through Wednesday at the Franciscan Monastery

The gathering is planned to acclaim the definition of the dogma of the Assumption, to be proclaimed by Pope Pius XII on November 1. The Franciscan Order has taken a leading part in working for the promulgation of this doctrine.

The Most Rev. Amleto G. Cicognani, Apostolic Delegate to the United States, will open the celebration with a Pontifical Mass, and the Most Rev Patrick A. O'Boyle, Archbishop of Washington, will preach at 10 a. m. Sunday.

The Most Rev. Bernard T. Espelage, O.F.M., the only Franciscan Bishop in the United States, will come from Gallup, N. M., to conduct the procession on Sunday afternoon. All the provincials and commissaries of the Order of Friars Minor in the United States—six provincials and eight commissaries—will be present and serve in various liturgical capacities during the four-day event.

Speakers listed at the event are the following Franciscan scholars: the Rev. Ralph Ohlmann, St. Francis Seminary, Cincinnati; the Rev. Antonine de Guglielmo, Mt. Alvernia Seminary, Wappingers Falls, N. Y.; the Rev. Ignatius Brady, Duns Scotus College, Detroit; the Rev. Marion Habig, St. Anthony Friary, St. Louis; the Rev. Maurice Grajewski, St. Francis College, Burlington, Wis; the Rev. Noel Moholy, Santa Barbara, Calif.; the Very Rev. Raphael Huber, Catholic University, Washington, D. C.; the Rev. Nathaniel Sonntag, Marathon, Wis; the Rev. Eric May, Marathon, Wis., and the Very Rev. Thomas Plassmann, New York City.

The Congress will close on October 11, feast of the Maternity of the Blessed Virgin with mass in the Slavic-Byzantine Rite to be celebrated by the Very Rev. John D. Janco, O.F.M.

Fairlington Church to Lay Cornerstone

The cornerstone of the first unit of the $250,000 Fairlington Presbyterian Church, on Leesburg pike near the Shirley hwy., will be laid Sunday at services starting at 3 p. m.

Dr. Lacy

Dr. Ben R. Lacy, jr., moderator of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church and president of Union Theological Seminary, Richmond, Va., will give the principal address.

The Rev. Charles C. Cowsert, pastor, said the first unit, estimated to cost $80,000, will be completed about February 1. This will include a large auditorium which will be used for services until three additional units including the sanctuary are constructed at a later date.

Dr. Claude Pritchard, Atlanta, Ga., executive secretary of the General Assembly Home Missions, will bring greetings to the session. About a dozen Potomac Presbytery ministers and local clergymen will participate.

Leadership School For Methodists To Start Tuesday

Sixteen courses will be taught at the Methodist Leadership Training School to be held at Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church, 900 Massachusetts ave. nw., for six weeks starting Tuesday.

Earl D. Miller, who will serve as dean of the school, said advance enrollment indicates that last year's student body of 650 will be "considerably surpassed."

Among subjects will be "Teaching Children in the Small Church," "Understanding Teen-Agers," "How Our Religion Began," and Old Testament study, Miller said.

Holy Name Societies Plan Family Rally

More than 500 representatives of 37 Holy Name Societies of Roman Catholic churches in the District have made plans for a Holy Year Family Rally in honor of Christ, Sunday, October 29, at Catholic University.

The plans were announced at a meeting of the Washington section of the Archdiocesan Union of the Holy Name Societies held this week at St. John's College High School, 1225 Vermont ave. nw.

Stassen's Kite

Mr. Stassen, who had an interesting conversation with Stalin in 1947, has written to the Kremlin offering to go to Moscow for another talk with the generalissimo. It is not unlikely that Stalin will take up the bid. For one thing, Mr. Stassen has sufficient prestige to be used as a medium, and has armed himself ahead of time with a lot of publicity to persuade acceptance; for another, the time is ripe for Stalin to sound off. A peace offensive out of the Kremlin is in order on the heels of its military reverse in Korea, and the comrades, moreover, must be anxious to encourage a relaxation in the preparedness that the Korean adventure produced among the people of America. Nothing bothers our authorities more than the prospect of a slackening in our sense of urgency, anyway.

Mr. Stassen's initiative may thus be well-timed only in Stalin's book. This is not to say that this newspaper does not believe always in keeping the door open to negotiations of self-enforcing agreements with Moscow on specific issues. But in these delicate days the job is, singularly, a problem for the two governments. It may be that Mr. Stassen thinks either that a tentative knock would be helpful if made unofficially or that the State Department is inhibited by the anti-Acheson feeling among the diehards of Mr. Stassen's own party. Nevertheless, Mr. Stassen is ill-advised to pursue such an undertaking when the two governments are in such close contact at Lake Success. If he had turned his attention to Mao Tze-tung, then we would have a different opinion, for there are no official relations of any sort between Washington and Peking. A few unofficial soundings in that direction might have some usefulness.

However, Mr. Stassen's enterprise is a reminder that, if this is the time for Stalin to try to soften relations, it is also the time to redefine American objectives in the world—and as authoritatively as possible. The occasion is the beating down of aggression; the forum, the United Nations. The United Nations has risen to its responsibilities, and is girding itself to follow through. With so many nations following the American leadership, the obligations of stewardship are clear, and it should never be forgotten that the way to inspire confidence is to be always ready to give an accounting.

New Military Phase

A new phase in the war-making in Korea will be ushered in when organized and positional resistance has been crushed. It might be called the Asiatic phase—marked by guerilla operation. No one knows for sure, of course, precisely how many organized North Korean units escaped the trap in the south, or whether a determined stand is yet to be made. There is some evidence that the North Koreans have been building new airfields, and they may have some additional planes. But so far, at least, the resistance north of the parallel has been token. The change is recognized by General Stratemeyer's announcement that strategic bombing has been halted—the strafing of the convoys coming into Pyongyang was tactical. Concurrently, it is more than a possibility that the North Korean—and Russian—strategy is to pin down American forces in long-drawn-out guerilla warfare.

Against this we should be on guard. In the protection of Korea against guerilla warfare the Republic of Korea itself ought to have primary responsibility, with United Nations backing. This, of course, doesn't mean the withdrawal of all American forces. To leave a vacuum in Korea would be disastrous, and obviously some American forces must remain until there is something to replace them. But the United States ought not to play a major part in this second stage of U. N. police action. In the first place, the United States is the butt of Communist propaganda in Korea, and it would be well not to have American forces in front in an international undertaking; secondly, American troops are needed for security in Europe; thirdly, they deserve progressive repatriation after their gallant deeds; finally, the nations of Asia ought to take the primary role in resolving the Korean problem.

Already there are the makings of an international police force that could be used in Korea. Filipino, Turkish, British Siamese, Canadian, French, Australian, New Zealand, Dutch and Belgian contingents are either now in Korea, on their way, or promised. More could be had from Latin America. Others should be sent by Pakistan and from India, whose Sikh troops are particularly adaptable to this type of police work. Undoubtedly the United States would have to assume some responsibility in this international force, with a regiment or so of ground troops, some air strength and some naval units to patrol coastal waters. But it is time that other countries assumed a major share of this duty in behalf of collective security.

Barbed-Wire Fence

The barb-studded wires of the fence erected around the United States by the McCarran Act are now threatening to prick friend and foe, the dangerous and the innocuous, without discrimination. During the course of the debate on the measure, its proponents tended, ironically enough, to minimize its impact, while its opponents asserted that it would affect great numbers of aliens friendly, or at least not unfriendly, to the United States. Now that it has to be enforced, the State Department finds itself in desperate straits between the two interpretations. The language of the act affords little help. Indeed, it is language that challenges the intrepidity of lawyers and defies the understanding of laymen. Section 5 (c), for example, declares with characteristic lucidity that > Notwithstanding the provisions of the tenth proviso to Section 3 of the Immigration Act of February 5, 1917, as amended (39 Stat. 875; 8 U. S. C. 136), or any other law—(1) the provisions of Section 1 (1) and 1 (3) shall be applicable to any alien within the purview of Section 3 (1) of the Immigration Act of 1924, as amended (43 Stat. 153; 8 U. S. C. 201), except Ambassadors, public Ministers, etc., etc., ad nauseam.

Well, as accurately as we can figure it out, the act will bar virtually all of the nationals and some of the official representatives of a number of totalitarian countries with which the United States is now collaborating in resistance to the spread of communism. It seems clear, as we pointed out when the McCarran bill was originally introduced and as the President asserted in his veto message, that the definition of "totalitarianism" laid down in the measure includes such countries as Spain, Portugal, Argentina and Saudi Arabia. Any students or businessmen or tourists from those countries, if they adhere to the regime in power in their homeland, must be excluded. So far as they are concerned, then, we shall be as much an Iron Curtain country as the Soviet Union.

In addition, we think, there will be serious diplomatic difficulties under the act. Its restrictions do not apply to "career diplomatic and consular officers who have been accredited by a foreign government recognized de jure by the United States and who are accepted by the President or the Secretary of State, and the members of the immediate families of such aliens." But many countries may wish to follow a practice commonly pursued by the United States and send over noncareer representatives for special purposes. None of these would be admissible under the terms of the act. If they are excluded, no doubt their homelands will counter by excluding comparable personnel from this country.

So far as the numerous United Nations organizations are concerned, the act permits admission only of "a designated principal resident representative" of a totalitarian government, "accredited resident members of the staff of such representative, and members of his immediate family." A totalitarian government might reasonably wish to send to the United Nations General Assembly a nonresident representative—Mr. Vishinsky, for example—and the United Nations could scarcely function here if such representatives were excluded by the United States. Moreover, to exclude, as the act appears to do, the families of all members of the staff of a totalitarian representative to the U. N. would be to impose on them a senseless and altogether unjustifiable hardship.

How the State Department will adjust its regulations under the law to the demands of its sponsors on the one hand and the demands of common sense and international comity on the other remains to be seen. The McCarran Act poses, we think, an impossible problem. Time was when Americans had enough pride in their country and enough faith in the durability of their own institutions to believe that a visit here would make friends and influence people in our behalf. Now we present ourselves to the world as frightened and ashamed. Like Russia, we have transformed ourselves into a hermit state.

Food For Yugoslavia

The exchange of surplus American agricultural commodities for strategic materials from other countries, a procedure authorized in the Commodity Credit Corporation charter and espoused by this newspaper 13 months ago, seems particularly adaptable to the present food crisis in Yugoslavia. Tito's country is in dire need of grain and other food because of a drought and crop failure this summer. The United States has large quantities of grain and dairy products now in storage. Yugoslavia produces copper, zinc, lead and bauxite—materials on the critical list which ought to be of special interest to American authorities because of the deplorable state of the strategic stockpile. Could not a swap of food for strategic materials be worked out to the advantage of both countries?

At the time The Washington Post suggested such a barter arrangement last year, we thought of it not only as a means of relieving want and disposing of annoying surpluses, but also as a way to lessen the dollar shortage abroad. Although there have been several small transactions along this line, the principal prospect, India, did not take up the proposal because she felt that she could get dollars for all the strategic materials she could conveniently produce. It is possible that Yugoslavia might be in a similar situation, and that the diversion of strategic materials to this country might disrupt existing commitments. But the food situation is said to be nearly as serious as that after World War II, and Yugoslavia might jump at the chance to exchange metals for food.

As a measure of the stringency in Yugoslavia, recent stories from Belgrade told of an order cutting bread rations by 10 percent. Although American authorities are unofficially aware of the situation, Yugoslavia so far has made only extremely informal requests for aid, apparently because of a misunderstanding of governmental machinery here. Moreover, a specific aid program would be difficult to arrange for lack of legislative authority; Yugoslavia is excluded from the ECA program.

However, such difficulties would not apply to a barter agreement, for which there is clear sanction in existing law. The United States now has in surplus wheat, corn, barley, sorghum, dried beans, canned meat, butter, cheese, eggs and dried milk—plenty to satisfy Yugoslav requirements. The only technicality in such a transaction would be that the Munitions Board would have to reimburse the Commodity Credit Corporation for strategic materials added to the stockpile—but this should be merely a matter of bookkeeping.

Here, it seems to us, is a rare opportunity for the United States to combine a humanitarian gesture and a political coup. The danger in Yugoslavia's food shortage, apart from the suffering involved, is that it could easily weaken her internally and make her more susceptible to Russian infiltration. The aim of American policy ought to be to keep and widen the breach between Belgrade and Moscow. A show of concern over Yugoslavia's plight and an offer to trade food for strategic materials would cost this country nothing, and it might well encourage the orientation of Yugoslavia toward the West.

Dogcatcher

John L. Lewis' epistolary clout at President Truman sounds as if it had been written with a lump of coal. Whether or not the United Mine Workers chieftain is qualified for a post as dogcatcher, a point on which Mr. Truman implied some slight doubt in his letter to a Colorado State senator, there can be no doubt whatever that as a wielder of the mordant pen Mr. Lewis has few peers. We are inclined to agree with Mr. Truman that such abilities on the part of an Ambassador to Russia would be wasted, for the Kremlin appears to be insensible even to Mr. Lewis' brand of verbal blockbusting. But certainly there ought to be a place on the White House staff for a diplomat who, if accorded bureaucratic rank, would promise to impound the "pusillanimous pups" in the State Department. We can imagine Mr. Lewis now exclaiming "torrid canine!" as he leaped upon some hapless foreign service officer. If nothing else, he could be employed to aid the Chief Executive during attacks of the foot-in-mouth disease and to express Mr. Truman's thoughts to the Marine Corps. On second thought, however, we think that the score is about even and everyone ought to be happy in this exchange of good clean fun. The Prisoner in the Blair House has gotten a quip off his chest, Mr. Lewis has exercised his purple passion, and Mr. Neal Bishop of Colorado has gotten his name in the papers.

Newspaperboy Day

In paying homage today to the young man who delivers your daily paper to your door, the newspapers of the United States are also recognizing their opportunity to develop character among American youth. It goes without saying that the carrier is as indispensable to the operation of a newspaper as the printing press. But he is not just a cog on a wheel; he is a young businessman. Few occupations for teen-agers offer so much chance both to earn pocket money and to learn responsibility, thrift and the elementary principles of management. To be a good carrier boy requires intelligence, initiative and, yes, a sense of public relations. It is more than a coincidence that many of the great men in American life look back proudly to their start as newspaper carriers. If not all the ambitious young men delivering papers can be President, at least they will emerge from their association richer both financially and in experience. We don't know what we—or you—would do without them.

BLACK BUTTERFLY

He chased it a long time,
Its velvety blackness showing clear
On the dusty blue and gold of the afterno
Sometimes he would see it climb
The still air, and then fear
That it was gone—only to find it soon
Drifting back to rest on the marigold.

At last, his hand had darted out to hold
The softness of its wings. He felt a s
As if but captive air
Moved in the sudden prison he had made . . .
And then he knew the wings were lovelie
When drifting in the sunlight there,
And suddenly he was afraid
That they might never fly again.

His hand was opened then—
The black butterfly
Was still a little while before wings fanned
Slowly . . . and lifted,
And he stood wondering why
A soft dust still was clinging to his hand.
He could not lose the feel of it as soon
As the wings had drifted
To the dusty blue and gold of the afternoon.

Europe First

It cannot be said too often that the 300 million people of Free Europe are more to us than the 400 million people of China. That is, the urgency is on the side of saving Europe. Europe, whence we derive our brains, character and basic institutions, is the old half of our Western civilization. "The West" must be saved whole if it is not to be destroyed piecemeal. For Russia means to destroy it all, root and branch.

Save the Europeans and they will remain friends to fight with us against Russian imperialism. Lose them, and communism's hellish techniques of political sterilization will transform them into enemies. Lose them, and every pastor and priest, every outstanding man of character and decency, down to village level, will be "liquidated." No leaders will remain but those who can be corrupted to communism. Without churches or a free press, oncoming generations will be poisoned against their own parents, to say nothing of "Fascist America."

Western Europe has skills and plant capacity (steel: 25 million tons a year) which Russia needs and covets. This prize, this springboard must be denied to Russia.

Then, if we can carry both loads without breaking our backs, we may help the Far East to become independent (as we did with the Philippines) and proudly unmoved by Moscow's bluffs and blandishments.

In Europe we have (any "peace offensives" notwithstanding) but one or two years to provide arms and restore self-confidence. Europe has enough idle steel capacity to make its own weapons or supply the steel to United States producers; enough idle men to form 100 divisions. Those facts point the way of stiffening its defense without greatly reducing its standard of living. As young men are drafted into uniform, the unemployed can fill their places in industry, two for one.

Communist "Liberators"

Headlines from Korea: "GI war-prisoners found slain, their hands tied behind their backs." . . . "Hundreds of South Korean civilians found in mass grave, hands bound behind them." . . . Pictures . . . Mute evidence that "the 'liberators' of the world's oppressed peoples" have been there.

Every veteran, every real American, should clip these stories and pictures—those already on record and the ones yet to be recorded—and keep them in a scrapbook. These stories and pictures are the trademarks of the "liberators."

As we read these stories, and turn away, sickened, from these grisly pictures, we should keep one thought uppermost in our minds: These North Korean "liberators," the perpetrators of the hideous crimes now being brought to our attention in South Korea, are the beloved comrades and apt pupils of the "original liberators," they who propagate the faith of "liberty" and teach the art of "liberation" from Moscow.

The North Korean "liberators" have applied well the lessons taught them by the engineers of the great "Kulak liberation" of the late '20's and early '30's; the more recent "Polish liberation" which found its highest expression in the mass graves in Katyn Forest, and the present operators of the world's greatest "liberated labor" camps. . . . The Kremlin mentors, originators and pioneer practitioners of "the new concept" of liberation and liberty, must be proud, indeed, of their North Korean alumni; they have struck a mighty blow on behalf of "the wave of the future."

And what of our domestic "liberators?" . . . Does the pervert language of Marxism-Stalinism afford them a means for "explaining" their sympathetic support of the North Korean determination to "liberate" their countrymen from the yoke of imperialism?

FREDERICK L. FREEMAN.
Coral Hills, Md.

Korea Genocide

Based on the law of genocide, which was conceived and applied in the Nurenberg trials, and under which the Nazi leaders who brought on World War II were tried and executed, each and every official of the North Korean government who is responsible for the ruthless murder of thousands of peaceful South Korean neighbors should be indicted and prosecuted and those who are found guilty of genocide, the most fiendish of all crimes, should be executed.

The U. N. would be a fitting tribunal for such indictment and trial; and no North Korean responsible for the murder and maltreatment of our soldiers or civilians should escape punishment.

When every Communist and Fascist will know that murder for conquest is a capital offense punishable by death, we may have the enduring peace for which people have been praying for ages.

NATHAN D. SHAPIRO.
Brooklyn, N. Y.

Rearmament: 500 B. C.

The Korean war and the rearmament of the United States in consequence recall a bit of ancient history.

About 500 B. C. the city-state of Athens had a quarrel with the city of Egina. Egina was on an island, and the first attacks of the Athenians were unsuccessful. The city of Athens had at the time a quantity of silver in its treasury from the silver mines at Laurium. It had been proposed to divide this among the citizens (the ancient form of boondoggling), but Themistocles persuaded the Athenians to put the money into the building of a fleet, of 200 ships.

A little later this Athenian contingent was the backbone of the Greek fleet which defeated the Persians at Salamis and checked the Persian invasion. And Herodotus, writing a few years afterward, comments that the Eginatan war saved Greece, by forcing the Athenians to make themselves a strong naval power.

Historical parallels are always dangerous, and frequently delusive, but this one is at least consoling—if the barbarians come again.

DAWSON J. HORINE,
Frederick, Md.

"Fancy Pants"

After much circumlocution the writer of the September 22 editorial, "Fancy Pants," surmised rightly that Mr. Lewis of the United Mine Workers was speaking metaphorically when he objected to the appearance of "fancy pants" Taft in the coal mines. Metaphorically "fancy pants" or "velvet pants" can stand for persons of special privilege of a state in any time or clime.

The writer also refers to a kind of "inverted snobbery;" a variety, he says, peculiar to the Russian ruling proletariat and taken on by the miners. His inference that less odium is associated with the opposite variety of "fancy pants," which, for the sake of clarity, we will call right-side-down snobbery, than to "inverted" snobbery, which would be, logically speaking, wrong-side-up, puzzles me.

If we are to believe the facts in the history of human events, it is "fancy pants" that has been wrong-side-up most of the time, ruthlessly and arrogantly kicking his limbs around at the expense of "ragged pants"—we will call him—yelling for "downs" for his gain, flaunting his "velvet," and suppressing the rags. This kind of behavior or snobbery, methinks, is perverted. On further thought it seems to be a case of extroversion that smacks of paranoia.

Recently "fancy pants," in spite of all his means to the development of wisdom and control of passions, has been behaving true to pattern, cavorting in the Senate chamber, smearing and bellowing, limiting and clamping in selfish interests. How does your writer dare to expect that "ragged pants," the injured one, should be the one with any show of tolerance or courtesy? And just why should he expect, in view of the recent panic in Congress, when all consideration for the fundamental freedoms of our democracy were flagrantly disregarded; and when the clamps were put down a little tighter on the voice of protest by the McCarran bill, that "ragged pants" of all people could be "capable of listening to arguments and counterarguments on political questions and making up" his mind "about the merits of the case as free-born citizens are expected to do?" (The quotation is from your writer.)

Was Mr. Taft any exception during this derelict behavior? Viewing the situation realistically, just what would one with a better understanding of human behavior and emotions expect when "fancy pants," who has never suffered a shivering limb, never lacked beauty or comfort in his home, nor fruition of hope, but has caused limbs to shiver a little more and to destroy hope, pokes his head in view, mouthing the inevitable phrases about a "great democracy" and prating about the opportunity for everyone in a system of free enterprise? Must a burning sense of injustice be called proletariat prejudice?

The voice of dissidence may be temporarily quelled, and "ragged pants" of our American proletariat may puzzle a little longer over his place as a free-born citizen in a "great democracy," but the time will come when he will blow a good bit of the "velvet" right off of "fancy pants" and compel him to face the facts of life. A state better than that of Molly Maguires is not enough. In other words, there must be a more equal distribution of the "velvet," not in terms of toys, gadgets or relics, like the Book of Knowledge your writer mentions, but in terms of beauty, grace, light, comfortable living, and especially more education.

So, I would say to Mr. Smarty Pants, your writer, to give Mr. Lewis credit for understanding his miners a little better. Perhaps one with a physiognomy that can support a fedora and a Corona-Corona can compensate by a feature capable of scenting the odoriferous elements that would call forth "the spirits from the vasty deeps" of the subconsciousness of these men. It is evident that the corresponding feature titled in its peculiar snobbery in the never-deviating mien of "fancy pants" is incapable of any delicacy or sensitiveness in the matter.

PLAIN PANTS.

Truman And The Campaign

By Mark Sullivan

Foreign Policy Issue

IF THE national election that will take place one month from next Tuesday were a presidential one, and if Mr. Truman were a candidate to succeed himself, the principal issue would be readily apparent. It would be the record of the Truman Administration. This might be modified to some extent by the factor that served President Roosevelt well in his 1944 campaign for reelection. We were in the very midst of a world war then, and many voters were susceptible to an appeal which expressed itself as "Don't change horses in the middle of the stream." It is doubtful, however, whether many voters think of the country as in such a state of crisis and urgency as to justify the "don't change horses" argument.

To speculate on what might be if Mr. Truman were running for reelection next month is not wholly beside the point. Actually, Mr. Truman and his record figure in the present campaign in important ways. One of these is apparent when partisans of the Administration tacitly or expressly urge voters to elect a Congress that will support the President's program. One variation of this is extremely vocal. Spokesmen of political action on the part of labor urge their following to defeat members of Congress who in the present session did not support President Truman's program. Concretely and with especial vehemence they urge defeat of members of Congress who frustrated one detail of Mr. Truman's program, his determined attempt to bring about repeal of the Taft-Hartley labor law.

This aspect of the campaign is especially conspicuous in Ohio. There Senator Taft, running for reelection, incurs attack for a double reason—he was at once an author of the Taft-Hartley law and the leader of successful opposition in Congress to Mr. Truman's demands for repeal of it. In more than a symbolic sense the fight in Ohio is between Senator Taft and President Truman. The situation that makes the Ohio contest a national one is suggested by an epithet used by some of Mr. Taft's opponents; derisively they call him "Mr. Republican."

In a strangely paradoxical way, President Truman is in the campaign just because he is not in it. He is in office and no action by voters can terminate his tenure for two years and three months, until the end of his term in January, 1953. How this condition may work out in voters' minds is intricately difficult to surmise. There may be voters who, in a direct election on the Presidency, would vote to terminate Mr. Truman's tenure and would do so aggressively—but who, considering that Mr. Truman must remain President for two years and three months would be relatively indifferent about the outcome of the congressional election.

There is a partial and perverse analogy between the position of President Truman and that of Prime Minister Chamberlain of Britain preceding the Second World War. Chamberlain followed toward Hitler a course which critics called "appeasement" but which Chamberlain said would result in "peace in our time." When the end of the course was war, Chamberlain was dropped from leadership and Winston Churchill substituted.

In the case of Mr. Truman, he has been responsible for our relations with Communist Russia during the five years since he took office. His responsibility is increased and made conspicuous by the fact that the Republicans in Congress during the period practiced nonpartisan support of the Administration's foreign policy. At the end of the five years, the present stage of our relations with Communist Russia is war with prospect of more and vast preparations for more. In this condition, if the coming election were a presidential one, with Mr. Truman running for reelection, would the country be likely to continue him in responsibility for our relations with Communist Russia?

Since the coming election is a congressional one, and Mr. Truman will be in office during the two years which compose the term of the Congress about to be elected, the question in the election is: What kind of Congress?

As bearing on our relations with Communist Russia and foreign relations generally, there is a condition evident though partially tacit in the Congress that now exists and probably throughout the country. If the present Congress were reelected man for man it would take an increased share of responsibility in this field. Not only Republicans but Democrats have in the past felt disquiet about the assumption that Congress should give more or less unquestioning support to the Administration's foreign policies.

Many Democrats as well as many Republicans who contributed to the overwhelming majorities which supported many Administration proposals have felt silent disquiet about some of them. They must now feel that their past disquiet was justified. The very fact that our relations with Communist Russia have come to a stage of war is an indictment of the way those relations have been conducted, and the reaction must include some self-reproach on the part of Congress.

Talmadge-Thurmond

It was good news, to this native of a State bordering on Georgia, that the Governors of Georgia and South Carolina are cousins, as disclosed by Drew Pearson in his recent report of a charming conversation between them. It is pleasant to know that one family clan contains the two of them. That makes just one less smart-alecky decadent family clan to disgrace the South.

Powell, Foe of Tobey, Is Ruled Off Ballot

CONCORD, N. H., Oct. 6 (U.P.). The biggest threat to the reelection of Charles W. Tobey as United State Senator was removed today when the State Ballot Law Commission ruled youthful Wesley Powell off the ballot.

Powell, who lost the Republican nomination to Tobey by fewer than 1400 votes, had filed to run as an independent candidate. That action could have split the G. O. P. vote in the State and given New Hampshire its first Democratic Senator in more than 20 years.

However, Tobey contended the petitions nominating Powell as an independent were "invalid and illegal" and asked the Ballot Law Commission and the New Hampshire Supreme Court to remove him from the contest.

The commission acted before the court could notify all parties of the action. It said that the petitions were "not filed 40 days prior to the election as required by law."

Powell's petitions were filed September 28, the date set by the Secretary of State's office as the final day, but Tobey said that was a mistake on the part of Secretary Enoch O. Fuller and the commission upheld him.

Powell, a protege of Senator Styles Bridges, (R., N. H.), took no exception to the ruling and said he had "no comment at this time."

CIO Officer Quits Post to Support Taft

NILES, Ohio, Oct. 6 (AP).—The treasurer of the Trumbull County CIO Council, who drew union criticism for having his picture taken with Senator Taft (R., Ohio), resigned today because it "is interfering with my duty as an American citizen."

Protesting what he described as the "attempted political domination of the CIO Political Action Committee," Otto L. Lyman released a letter to the council in which he pledged his support to Taft.

CIO leaders had no immediate comment. Jack Kroll, Political Action Committee chief, told reporters in Cincinnati he was "completely unfamiliar" with the situation.

"I have been diligent in my work for the American workman," wrote Lyman, "and now I am told his work is but secondary to the political campaign to purge Senator Robert A. Taft from office.

"I have been told that all our efforts, funds and resources are to be expended to defeat Taft for reelection. I do not believe this is the purpose for which the CIO was created.

"The CIO was created for the equality and freedom of workmen. It was not created as a dictatorial policy to rule our every action in life."

Lyman said he has been a union member 32 years and would remain in his union and continue to work for union objectives.

"But like thousands of other toilers," he continued, "I bitterly resent this encroachment by the top CIO brass on our freedom of choice at the polls. As a democratic organization, we of the rank and file of labor should have the freedom to make our own choice at the polls."

He said he was supporting Taft because "he is honest and sincere" and has voted for "the benefit of the rank and file workman."

Last Chance To Register In Va. Today

New voters in nearby Virginia who have qualified in every respect but registration will have a final opportunity today to register in time for participation in the November 7 general election.

In Alexandria, Arlington, Fairfax and Falls Church registrars who normally close their offices on Saturday will observe special registration hours. In addition, residents of both Arlington and Fairfax Counties may register during the day with individual precinct registrars at their homes or offices.

Central registrars in the four communities have announced these special hours: Alexandria, City Hall, 9 a. m. to 1 p. m.; Arlington, County Courthouse, 9 a. m. to 5 p. m.; Fairfax, County Courthouse, 9 a. m. to 4:30 p. m., and Falls Church, 8:30 a. m. to 4:30 p. m.

Prospective voters also may register with these precinct registrars during the same hours to be observed by central registrars in their respective counties:

Town Offers $100 to Find Taft's Tomato-Tosser

CANTON, Ohio, Oct. 6 (AP). Village council at nearby Waynesburg offered a $100 reward today to anyone who can find the person who hit Senator Taft (R., Ohio) with a ripe tomato.

Taft was struck on the chest Wednesday while making a political speech. Several other tomatoes fell at his feet. But he took scant notice and continued his speech.

"This unfortunate incident has been terribly embarrasing to the good people of the village," the council said.

rules, designed to relieve the "unbalanced competitive condition among television networks," might limit the amount of time any station can give one network. Or they might prescribe a minimum number of hours stations must take from each network.

For instance, the FCC said it might permit any station to choose one 5-hour time segment a week from one network. With this exception, the station—if in a one-station community—might be required to limit its programs from one network to no more than two consecutive hours; in a two-station community for no more than three consecutive hours; and in a three-station community for no more than four hours at a time.

The FCC's action is linked with a petition by Dumont and CBS asking the FCC to allocate the time use of the coaxial cables over which TV programs are transmitted from city to city. Dumont last winter charged NBC's network policies tended to squeeze out competition.

Admiral Corp. Scores Color Video Ruling

Ross D. Siragusa, president of the Admiral Corp., has stated that the recent Federal Communication Commission ruling on color television will cause the American public to lose 95 percent of the three billion dollars it has invested in home television receivers.

Speaking in Chicago last week, Siragusa predicted that only 5 percent of the 10 million sets, which will be in use at the end of the year, would be compatible with the Columbia Broadcasting System color system favored by the FCC.

The commission ruling, he said, would force an impractical color system on the public and force those who want only black and white reception to "pay a substantial premium to continue to receive black and white from a color telecast."

Partly Cleared In Fatality

An AB&W bus driver must face a Municipal Court jury although a coroner's jury yesterday held him responsible "but not to a criminal degree" for the death September 27 of Miss Ella Barner.

He is Hubert C. Costello, 31, of 2442 S. Nelson st., Arlington, driver of an AB&W bus which struck Miss Barnes, 65, of 4002 2d st. sw., on September 23.

At an inquest yesterday, Detective Sergt. Emmett Waters testified as to circumstances of the accident. Accident Investigation Unit officials said that although Costello was partially vindicated by the jury's verdict, he still must go to Municipal Court for trial on a charge of negligent homicide.

big crap game in operation during a surprise visit to a suburban night spot.

4. Two Chicago policemen reported seeing a mysterious gunman in the Federal courthouse corridor but failed to seize him in a chase.

Ricca, also known as De Lucia, is described by Senator Wiley (R., Wis.), committee member, as the leader of the Nation's "Mafia", a secret underworld gang also known as the "Black Hand" when it began on a small scale in pre-prohibition days, operating an extortion racket. A drawn black hand on extortion notes identified the source.

Ricca is one of seven men sentenced in New York in 1943 for conspiring tto extort $1 million from the movie industry. He is out on parole from a ten-year Federal prison sentence, living in a $100,000 suburban River Forest home and operating a $300,000 farm west of Chicago.

A committee spokesman said the group failed to learn from Ricca what he did with $391,000 he is reported to have "got rid of" in the last three years.

The committee said it was blocked by what Ricca called his "loss of memory." It then announced it would hold a night session tonight.

Another witness was John S. Boyle, Democratic state's attorney of Cook County (Chicago), who was elected in 1948 as "the man the gangsters fear."

He said he got $2500 fee in 1946 for serving as legal counsel for the former Trans-American News Publishing Company—a firm set up to compete with the lucrative race information chain headed by the late James M. Ragen.

A gang-style ambush cut down Ragen in Chicago in June, 1946, after he accused former Capone gangsters of trying to muscle in on his multi-million-dollar Continental News Service. He died seven weeks later.

Boyle told newsmen Trans-American was just one of some 100 clients he had while in private practice of law. The disclosure, however, seems likely to be a factor in the November 7 election in Illinois, where Senator Lucas, President Truman's right hand man, seeks reelection.

Stevenson told the committee that Congress should enact laws cutting interstate commerce channels used by slot machines.

He also urged laws to ban distribution of race news by wire to handbooks, and repeal of the Federal stamp tax on slot machines.

While he was testifying, the internal revenue collector elsewhere in the courthouse gave newsmen a report listing 33 September tax stamp applicants. This means owners of 33 slot machines seek to pay taxes for operating in northern Illinois. They are in addition to hundreds previously listed.

Stevenson has been using State policemen — usually employed only on highway patrols—to raid hundreds of taverns and roadhouses outside Chicago and to seize and destroy slot machines craps tables.

He said he doesn't like to infringe on the territory of local law enforcement officials in Illinois, but he has done so when they failed to do their jobs. And as a result, he said, commercial gambling is at its lowest ebb in years.

But he said the public demands that the Federal Government as well as State agencies step in to fight crime.

And when it comes to slot machines, the public is "confused," he declared, "when Washington taxes what Illinois outlaws."

Kefauver Has 7-Point Federal Crime Program

CHICAGO, Oct. 6 (AP)—Senator Kefauver today sketched a seven-point Federal legislative program which he believes would put the brakes on syndicated crime.

The Tennessee Democrat, who heads the Senate Crime Investigating Committee, outlined his proposals in a talk before the Executives Club of Chicago.

Here they are:

1. Ban interstate shipment of gambling devices, especially slot machines.

2. Require a five-minute delay in transmitting race results.

3. Devise ways to keep racing wire services out of the hoodlums' hands.

4. Forbid the use of the mails to clear bets and transmit records between handbooks.

5. Revise income tax laws to require more information on money handled by gamblers and racketeers.

6. Prohibit conspiracy to violate State laws through interstate commerce.

7. Coordinate investigative and intelligence functions of the Post-office, Internal Revenue Bureau and FBI.

Kostelanetz to Direct New York Crime Probe

CHICAGO, Oct. 6 (AP).—Boris Kostelanetz has been named special counsel for the Kefauver Senate Crime Investigating Committee's work in New York and New Jersey.

Senator Kefauver (D., Tenn.) said today Kostelanetz, of New York, is "very competent and has a great deal of experience" in investigating criminals and rackets.

He will "take the lead and coordinate" the committee's investigations of gambling and vice in the New York and New Jersey areas, Kefauver told a reporter.

Kostelanetz, brother of Andre Kostelanetz, orchestra leader, is a Wall Street lawyer who fame as a gangbuster for his part in prosecution of seven men convicted in New York in 1943 of conspiring to extort one million dollars from the movie industry.

Among the seven are Paul (The Waiter) Ricca, Charles (Cherry Nose) Gioe, Louis (Little New York) Campagna, and Phil D'Andrea, onetime bodyguard of Al Capone.

lowed him as he walked swiftly away.

"Please, may I come back, Jim? May I come back?" she begged.

He went into the men's room, and she waited on a bench outside.

A minute later, Mr. and Mrs. James E. Dawn, sr., her former father-in-law and mother-in-law, passed and she followed them.

"I'm coming back to live with you," she said.

"No, you're not, replied the elder Mrs. Dawn. "We aren't your in-laws any longer."

"Yes I am, I'm coming back."

"Got What She Wanted"

"Look," said the elder Dawn, a retired policeman. "You wanted a divorce. Now you've got it."

"I don't want a divorce without my baby. I want my baby," she said. "May I come back to you?"

Patiently, the man said, "Look, you must leave us alone, it is over."

"It is not over," the young woman said. "I won't let you alone."

They stopped again out in Judiciary Square Park, and the pair threatened Verna with arrest for disorderly conduct.

"I don't care, I don't care," she replied.

"The judge has ruled. Haven't you any respect for the law?" said Dawn. "My baby is more important than the law," she cried.

Unfaithful, Letter Related

Not once did they mention the testimony, nor the letter where Verna had said she loved another man, had committed adultery in the presence of the child. Verna had testified that her husband forced her to write the letter.

"Would you have wanted to come back if you had won the divorce?" asked the elder Dawn.

"No," she admitted.

They walked quickly up 5th st., and past F sts., where a summoned policeman was waiting. The elder Dawns got into the car.

"Do you want me in the front or back?" pleaded Verna.

They closed the door and pulled off without her.

Verna looked at the policeman, turned around, turned around again, and walked quickly up F st. She took one more look at the courthouse and did not turn again.

4 New Polio Cases Reported; 3 in Montgomery

Four new cases of polio were reported in Greater Washington yesterday, bringing the total to 351 cases for the area this year.

One case was reported in the District, a 17-year-old girl of the 3500 block of Nebraska ave. nw. who was admitted to Gallinger Hospital October 5, bringing the total for the city to 152.

Three cases were reported in Montgomery County. They include a 5-year-old boy from the 500 block of Bennington rd., Silver Spring, admitted to Children's Hospital, October 3; a 7-year-old boy of the 500 block of Bacon st., Silver Spring, admitted to Walter Reed Hospital September 29, and a 40-year-old woman of the 5300 block of Baltimore ave., Bethesda, who became ill October 4 but was not hospitalized.

Board Hears New Plea for Bridge Granite

The Fine Arts Commission found itself yesterday in the middle of an old inter-agency controversy over the surfacing on Arlington Memorial Bridge.

The dispute stems from findings of a Public Roads Administration investigation into the cause of an August 2, 1946 accident when a bus plunged through the Memorial bridge railing, killing one and injuring 44.

Replacing the present granite block with asphalt was one of four recommendations of the roads agency, and yesterday H. S. Spellman of the PRA appeared before the Fine Arts Commission to restate the agency's case.

He was opposed by Gen. U. S. Grant, III, a member of the special commission which planned the span several years ago, Harry T. Thompson, superintendent of National Capital Parks, and Hillory Tolson, acting director of the National Park Service.

Granite Called More Slippery

Twice the Fine Arts group has reaffirmed the granite-should-remain position of the park officials.

The issue came up yesterday because the PRA recently notified the park officials they wanted to replace the granite with asphalt in the near future. PRA claims asphalt is less slippery when wet.

Park officials counter the argument by stating the bridge is dry 80 percent of the time and the accident rate is lower there than on the old 14th street span which has an asphalt surface.

The Fine Arts Commission, meeting for the first time since President Truman named six new members, took the matter under advisement.

In another action yesterday, the commission gingerly considered the momentous chores it will have under the recently passed law to protect Old Georgetown architecture. Under the law, the District Commissioners must consult the Fine Arts group before issuing a permit to alter the exterior of any buildings in a newly defined Old Georgetown area.

To Meet with D. C. Heads

H. P. Caemmerer, commission secretary, said the Fine Arts group would meet next week with the District heads to set up machinery for administering the act.

The commission also approved architect's plans on these building projects here:

A four-million-dollar national headquarters building for the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, to be located at Louisiana and D sts. nw., facing the Union Station Plaza.

An eight-story office building, designed by Leon Chatelain, a local architect, to be located on the northeast corner of 3d and C sts. nw. It will be called the Benjamin Franklin Building, Caemmerer said.

A biology-greenhouse building and a dental school building at Howard University. Both were designed by Hillyard Robinson, a Washington architect.

The Fine Arts group also approved sculpture models for the new Federal Courthouse here. In the Circuit Court of Appeals courtroom will be bronze busts of jurists: John Marshall, King Alfred, Blackstone and Joseph Storey. The commission also considered sketches for sculpture work at the new National Institute of Health in Bethesda.

Three Are Added To Maryland U. Psychology Dept.

Addition of three new staff members to the University of Maryland's Department of Psychology was announced yesterday by Dr. T. S. Andrews, department head.

The three are Dr. Arthur W. Ayers, Dr. Roy K. Heintz and Dr. Sherman Ross.

Dr. Ayers, comes from the American Viscose Company where he was manager of personnel relations at the Wilmington, Del., home office.

Dr. Heintz comes from the University of Pennsylvania where he has been an instructor since 1946.

SAMUEL BELOFF
. . . avoids night in jail

Sylvia Beloff, 7-year-old heiress, yesterday was turned over to her mother, Mrs. May Beloff Spivak, in New York City.

The child's uncle, Samuel Beloff, agreed to deliver her after Judge Alexander Holtzoff threatened to jail him.

The child is the principal heir to the estimated $250,000 estate of Simon Beloff, real estate man, who died Monday at the age of 68. Beloff divorced his wife, May, two years ago on the grounds of adultery and was awarded Sylvia's custody. The wife has married the co-respondent, Leon Spivak.

Mrs. Spivak filed a habeas corpus suit Thursday, and Samuel Beloff was served with the papers at the funeral of Simon Beloff, his brother.

Judge Holtzoff that afternoon demanded that the child be brought into District Court yesterday morning for the habeas-corpus action.

Allan Kamerow, the Beloff estate attorney, reported that the girl was flown to New York Thursday afternoon, and that Samuel Beloff could not produce her immediately.

Yesterday morning Judge Holtzoff ordered Sylvia turned over to Myer Koonin and Jacob Gordon, Mrs. Spivak's attorneys, before 3 p. m., otherwise Samuel Beloff would go to jail.

Samuel Beloff, a taxi owner and operator, jumped in his seat when the judge said this.

Speaking to Kamerow, Judge Holtzoff declared:

"If there is any difficulty in getting the child, your client will spend the night in District Jail."

At 3 p. m. Judge Holtzoff was informed that Sylvia had been turned over to Mrs. Spivak at a New York airport.

The judge scheduled the case for full hearing October 23.

High Court Seeks Better Acoustics

The Supreme Court yesterday took a tentative step toward wiring itself for sound.

For years justices at the far ends of the long court bench have had trouble hearing lawyers and their fellow justices. Last term a three-justice committee was set up to do something about the court's acoustics. Justice Black, the chairman, sits close to the middle of the bench, but Justices Clark and Minton, the other members, are at the far left and right.

Yesterday, at the committee's order, a New York electronics firm tried out a speaker on the lawyers' lecturn in front of the bench with loud speakers perched on either side of the courtroom. Tests next week will include microphones at each justice's place on the bench.

But even if a new system is worked out (and a new curved court bench also is under consideration) Congress would have to appropriate the money to pay for it. That would mean it couldn't be ready for use until about a year from now.

Bob Cilento Scores Three Times, Twice In 2 Minutes

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

Without warning, George Washington's Colonials suddenly rushed over two touchdowns within two minutes in the fourth quarter and caved in West Virginia, 21-14, last night before 8007 fans at Griffith Stadium.

Battering Bob Cilento, noted for his passing before last night, rammed over for those two tide-turning scores on short thrusts through the middle after Andy Davis and Charlie Butler collaborated in a series of spectacular pass plays to set them up.

STATISTICS

West Virginia		George Washington
8	First downs	21
185	Rushing yardage	144
173	Passing yardage	316
25	Passes attempted	44
10	Passes completed	21
1	Passes intercepted	1
4	Number of punts	22
39	Punting average	22
3	Fumbles lost	1
50	Yards penalized	70

Those two late rushes gave Cilento three touchdowns for the evening. He had brought the Colonials up to a 7-7 tie with a 3-yard scoring rush in the third quarter.

It was a banner niht for Davis, too. The work horse tailback was responsible for a total gain of 305 yards. He completed 17 out of 31 passes for 264 yards, and ran up 41 more yards on 10 rushing attempts—the greatest performance, statistically, in his three-year career at GW.

The sudden turn in GW's favor came as a surprise to practically everybody. It wasn't that the Colonials hadn't been able to pile up enough yardage, just that they were a wasteful team, failing dismally to follow up three excellent scoring chances.

On the passing of Davis, and the running of Cilento and Jimmy Kline, GW smashed to West Virginia's 15 and 28-yard lines in the first half without going the rest of the way.

In the third quarter, the Colonials went 64 yards to West Virginia's three before petering out in the face of some brilliant defensive play by Mountaineer Linebacker Adle Joseph.

Butler Snags Passes

But with time running out and their backs to the wall, 14-7, the Colonials became economy-minded. With eight minutes left, Davis began whipping passes to Butler, who was pinking 'em off the ground and leaping up for one-handers, and they lef GW on a 79-yard touchdown march.

Butler nabbed three of Davis' tosses for 47 yards, the last giving the Colonials a first down on West Virginia's three. Cilento barreled over right tackle and it was still 14-13, West Virginia. John Shullenbarger converted for the second time and it was a tie game.

Moments later, Davis pounced

With Shirley Povich

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.—The Phils' Whiz Kids are fast learning the facts of life in this World Series, including a new understanding that the Yankees are not at all particular how they win ball games. In three contests to date, the Phils have been beat by a 1-0 Yankee pitcher, by a tenth-inning DiMaggio homerun, and by their own fumbles.

They've held the Yankess to six runs in the three games, and haven't won any. And if they don't have a new respect also for Casey Stengel's strategic maneuvering, then they must simply be dismissed as too immature to understand such matters.

Povich

Stengel was positively inspirational today, you'd have to say, even if you doubt his genius. Dith the Phils' potential winning run on third base in the ninth and only one out, Pinchhitter Dick Whitman knocked a fierce ground ball toward first. An inning before, slow-moving Johnny Mize with a bad arm had been playing the position for the Yankees.

But when the Yanks needed a nimble play on the ball and a good throwing arm to get it to the plate ahead of Gran Hamner, dashing home from third, they got it from Jack Collins. As if divining the need, Stengel had substituted Collins as the ninth inning started.

JOE DiMAGGIO once wrote a book titled, "Lucky To Be a Yankee," and tonight Billy Johnson is somewhat grateful that he, too, is a Yankee. Another team might not have taken him out of the ear-burning spot on which he found himself in the Phils' ninth inning with the score tied at 2-2, one out and Whiz Kid on third base.

Thirdbaseman Johnson had out-smarted himself badly in that inning when Andy Seminick popped a bunt in his direction with none out and Gran Hamner on second base. Not content with merely catching the ball for the out, Johnson went strategic, let the ball drop safely in the hope of trapping Hamner between second and third.

When he picked the ball up to make a play for Hamner, no play confronted him. Hamner had a head start toward third and was out of range, racing into an empty bag. The trap had no prey. As a last resort, Johnson was able to throw the slow-moving Seminick out at first base, but he had put the Yanks in an awful spot. Then he learned how nice it is to be a Yankee when Tom Ferrick got the side out without damage.

Today, the Phils outhit the Yankees, 10 to 7, but it was still useless. The Phils made three bad plays, and the Yanks permitted none of them to go uncapitalied. They were more dangerous today with two out than with none out, all of their runs scoring after the Phils' pitchers had two men away.

For two weeks before the season ended, the Phils had two scouts tabbing the Yankees. They thought they had a good book on the Yankees' strengths and weaknesses. They assumed that if they could stop Joe DiMaggio, Yogi Berra and Johnny Mize, they could win the World Series. Except for DiMaggio's homer, they have been stopping 'em. The combined batting average of the trio (33-4) is .121.

Yet the Phils haven't been beating the Yankees, Who should bob up as their chief nemesis but little Gerry Coleman, the eighth-place hitter who didn't figure largely in the book on the Yankees the Phils' scouts had made. Coleman has been hitting .360, has driven in half of the six runs the Yanks have scored in the three games, and twice crossed the plate himself. There has been only one run that Coleman hasn't had anything to do with.

IF THE PHILS don't see the spectre of a fourth straight defeat tomorrow, then again they're simply too young to understand the omens. Back at them may come Vic Raschi, the big, strong righthander who held them to two hits in the Series opener or Stengel can call on Whitey Ford, the sensational little lefthander. And on call in the bullpen will be Allie Reynolds, the fellow who beat 'em 2-1, a couple of days ago.

For the Phillies, the sad fact is that they haven't been hitting for nearly a month. They blew 13 of their last 16 games in the pennant race before finally beating Brooklyn in the big one. And at the end of three games in this Series, they have only three measly runs to show for their swinging against Yankee pitching.

They won the National League pennant by winning 31 of 47 games that were decided by a single run, but in the Yankees they are meeting the champions in that department. Like the Phils, the Yankees aren't hitting either, but the difference is that they aren't losing.

CYO Football League Opens Season Today

The Catholic Youth Organization Football League will open its fourth season today at 9:30 a. m. on the Ellipse with Dale Doty, Assistant Secretary of the Interior, throwing out the first ball.

At 9:30 on the East Ellipse, Blessed Sacrament plays St. Ann's. St. James' plays Holy Trinity on the West Ellipse at the same time.

Bob Miller Or Church to Oppose Ford

NEW YORK, Oct. 6 (AP).—Manager Eddie Sawyer, his back to the wall today after his Philadelphia Phillies had dropped their third straight World Series game to the New York Yankees, told newsman rather gloomily in the dressing room:

"It wil be Bob Miller or Bubba Church for me tomorrow."

A reporter asked Sawyer what he thought his chances were now.

"Not bad if we win tomorrow," said Sawyer. "Our pitchers will be rested up. I've named Miller as my tentative choice to start but I don't knqw if he'll be able to make it. His shoulder has been troubling him and he can't go a long distance. If he doesn't go, then it will be Church." Miller had an 11-6 record for the season, and Church, 8-6.

For the Yankees, Casey Stengel announced he would start Rookie Lefthander Whitey Ford in tomorrow's fourth — and perhaps final — game. Ford won nine straight games before losing, and finished with a 9-1 record.

"The kid's a good pitcher," Casey said. "I'm a little worried, though. The Phils looked a lot better hitting against the left-hander (Lopat) today than they did against the right-handers."

In the Phils' dressing room the gloom hung so thick you could cut through it with a knife.

"I think I was trying to be too sure. Then the ball went off my fingers."

Young Franny Hamner muttered these words as he sat dejectedly in his cubicle. He faced the wall with his back to reporters and teammates milling in the room.

"I've made a lot of errors, but that one—" He didn't bother to finish the sentence.

Hamner's error came in the eighth inning with the bases loaded and two out. Jim Konstanty had just replaced Ken Heintzelman who had walked three batters in a row getting the first two.

Pinchhitter Bobby Brown slapped the pitch to Hamner. The shortstop picked up the ball and then it rolled off his hands. In trooped Gerry Coleman with the tying run from third.

"Breaks, that's what they're getting—breaks," said Sawyer, the only calm National Leaguer in the dressing room.

"They're no better than we are," said Sawyer as he puffed away at a cigar.

The players had filed into the room silently and dejectedly except for Russ Meyer, the fiery-tempered pitcher who pitched in the losing ninth inning.

He strode to the door cursing himself loudly and banging his cap against his legs.

"I'm a dirty, rotten 'so and so.' What a year I'm having."

Later, when he had calmed down, reporters approached him.

"Coleman hit a curve ball for that winning hit," he said. "But those other two hits—why, Gene Woodling topped his ball and Phil Rizzuto just got the ball on the end of his bat."

Post Cameramen And Writers Again Cover Big Games

The Washington Post's sports staff and cameramen will fan out again for another big football weekend beginning today.

At East Lansing, Mich., Morris Siegel will report the Maryland-Michigan State game. Charles DelVecchio will be there to take pictures. Herb Heft will cover Northwestern's invasion against Navy at Baltimore and Harry Goodwin will cover from the pictorial point.

Jack Walsh will write about the doings of Georgetown and Tulsa at Griffith Stadium and Jack Lartz will be on hand with his camera.

Sports Editor Bus Ham and Morris Siegel will cover the Redskins-New York Giants game here Sunday with Arthur Ellis providing photographic coverage.

Jittery Phils Blow 3d Game, 3-2

"SCOOTER" SCOOTS SAFELY—Phil (Scooter) Rizzuto dives headlong into the bag on a steal of second base as Phillies' Secondbaseman Mike Goliat reaches for the throw from Catcher Andy Seminick in the third inning of yesterday's World Series game. The ball got away from Goliat, Rizzuto went to third and later scored the game's first run up, Manager Eddie Sawyer of the Phils was vague about his choice for the fourth game but indicated it would be either Bob Miller or Bubba Church.

There was no warning that Meyer, who had moved into the game in the ninth, was going to be the losing pitcher. He got rid of Bill Johnson and Cliff Mapes easily for the first two outs, and then got a brutal setback. Gene Woodling, batting in ninth place in the Yankee's lineup shuffle, whacked a bounding ball at Bloodworth, and it abounded with grief for the Phils.

With clean handling it would have been the third out. But Bloodworth, a late-inning replacement for Mike Goliat, failed to come up with it smartly. It bounded off his stiffened fingers an dhe had no play. Woodling was curiously credited with a single.

Held to four hits to that point by Ken Heintzleman, and Jim Konstanty and Meyer, the Yankees packed three into that ninth. Little Phil Rizzuto banged a line drive toward second base that Bloodworth cleverly smacked down, but that also went as a hit, and Woodling moved into scoring position on second base.

Coleman had made two of those four Yankee hits of the first eight innings, driven in their first run, and now he didn't dally. On a one-and-one count, he unloaded a long drive into left center. Frantically, Eddie Mayo and Richie Ashburn sprinted for the ball. It was useless. It dropped safely between them, and Woodling was home with the ball game.

Eddie Lopat, the Yankees starting pitcher, apparently was doomed to a 2-1 defeat when suddenly, with two Yankees out in the eighth, Heintzelman got himself into a foul mess with his wildness. He walked the pesky Coleman on a 3-2 pitch, and then couldn't get any of his next eight throws over the plate. Berra and DiMag took them with their bats on their shoulders, and the bases were full of Yanks.

Manager Eddie Sawyer called a halt, personally escorted Heintzelman from the mound, and called for his relief ace, Jim Konstanty, to face the next Yankee hitter. Bobby Brown was Casey Stengel's choice as a pinch-hitter for Hank Bauer. None could quarrel with that choice as Brown, the World's Series batting terror with an average of .500 in the Series.

Unperturbed, Konstanty quickly got ahead of the count on Brown, had him two strikes and a ball, and apparently was out of the inning when Brown whacked a routine grounder at Hamner, whom they call the finest of all National League shortstops.

If Konstanty was indulging himself with a sign of relief, it was short-lived. Before he could turn his back to watch the play, the roar of the crowd had warned him there was something amiss. And it was. Hamner had booted it. Not once but twice. With his original fumble at his feet, he made a second grab of the ball and missed, still with time for a play at first base that didn't materialize.

And Coleman dashed home from third with the tying run. Johnny Mize popped up for the third out, but the Yankees had the 2-2 tie they were playing for.

Back in the third inning, the Yankees wrenched a run out of tories of the 1950 season, and then Phil stole second base.

A smarter throw by Andy Seminick would have nipped Rizzuto, but it was low, and Phil scrambled up when the ball went into short center field, and hot-footed all the way to third. Coleman, who had been promoted from eighth to second in the Yankees' batting order, they were no less effective and Lopat worked himself out of every hole until the sixth when the Phils tied it up.

On singles by Gran Hamner and Andy Seminick, the Phils put men on first and third with one out in the second, but Lopat calmly grabbed up Goliat's grounder and held Hamner on third while making a play at first. Heintzelman grounded to Johnson for the third out.

Del Ennis launched the Phils' tying run in the sixth after Lopat had retired nine men in a row. With two out, he doubled down the right field line, and Dick Sisler got him home with a single to left. As if smarting at that indignity, Yogi Berra promptly picked Sisler off first base on the next pitch, a swing and a miss by Hamner.

And then in the seventh, the Phils went ahead, 2-1, for the first time in this series, with a run compounded off Hamner's single to center, a sacrifice by Seminick and Goliat's single to center.

The Phils threatened to get another run off Lopat in the eighth after Ashburn led off with a single to right and was sacrificed to second, but Lopat handled Ennis and Sisler with ease.

Hamner made a worthy bid to atone for his grievous eighth-inning error by leading off the ninth with a rousing double to center that DiMaggio held to two bases by dint of a super recovery.

And then on Andy Seminick's attempted sacrifice that took the form of a pop bunt to Third Baseman Bill Johnson, the Phils got an immense break. Johnson deliberately let the pop hit the ground, thinking to trap Hamner between second and third and wipe a man out of scoring position.

No third baseman ever had it as embarrassing. Hamner was too far on his way to third, and out of the trap. Johnson made a brief chase, saw there was no play at third base, and luckily covered some of his embarrassment by being able to make a play at first in time to get the slow-running Seminick for one out.

Then it was that Tom Ferrick earned his pay with the Yanks and took the grateful Johnson off the spot. He discreetly walked Mike Goliat and then worked smartly on Pinchhitter Dick Whitman.

Whitman hit a ground ball to First Baseman Jack Collins, and the Yankee strategy of substituting the fast-fielding Collins for lumbering Johnny Mize at the start of the inning, paid off. Collins fired the ball home to Berra. Hamner slid into the plate viciously, with one spiked foot riding high into Berra's face, but he was securely tagged out.

Now it was two out, with Phils still on first and second and Waitkus up. No trouble for Ferrick. He got Waitkus on a soft fly to Mapes in right field, and the Yanks went to bat in the ninth, and wrapped it up.

Hoyas Open at Home With Tulsa Favored

By Jack Walsh
Post Reporter

Tulsa, picked for the third straight time over Georgetown, hopes to make its six-point favoritism stick in the Hoyas' home opener at Griffith Stadium, 2:30 o'clock this afternoon.

Twice, in 1947 and 1948, Georgetown went to Tulsa underdog and twice posted victories, 12-0 and 13-7. Georgetown also won the only other meeting in 1923, 26-0.

Today's opponents have a few striking similarities. Both have been beaten in their last outings, for one thing. Georgetown will be trying to rebound from a crushing 34-14 defeat by Penn State last week. Tulsa has had a week to recover from a 23-14 loss to San Francisco. In its opener, Tulsa beat McMurry, 20-13.

San Francisco's Ollie Matson, Negro fullback who sprints the 100 in 9.6, beat the Oklahomans by taking a scoring pass in the flat for 65 yards and rushing through the middle for a 22-yard touchdown.

While Georgetown bemoans a lack of experience, the Hoyas are facing a team equally young. Six sophs are expected to start for the visitors.

One of the Hoyas' good pass defenders, Bob Versprille, won't dress for the game. Tulsa has four good men out, including Leroy Whitman, outstanding defensive back last year.

With Tulsa's tricky offense, an interesting contest looms. J. O. (Buddy) Brothers, in his fifth year as head coach, has come up with a unique variation of the split-T. Brothers has his back stationed 2 yards or less behind his linemen. The attack is one that calls for precision. After two games and a week to sharpen it in practice, Tulsa has high hopes of breaking loose a game that puts the accent on running.

Two sophs figure to direct it, Ronnie Morris and Tommy Hudspeth. Tulsa's top runner to date has been Jake Roberts, fleet 200-pounder. At left half is Bill Parsons, and Soph Howard Waugh, another 200-pounder, will be the starting fullback.

The only two seniors in the starting line-up will be the ends, Fred Smith and Kenny Click. Smith, rated one of the best pass receivers in the Missouri Valley Conference, is co-captain with Center Jim Graham, good linebacker.

Captain Tommy Hardiman will be trying to make Coach Bob Margarita's T-formation click. The word is that Soph Bob (Bugs) Thompson will get more of a chance on offense.

Thompson, Tech High flash who spent a freshman year at Clemson, will be making his first Griffith Stadium appearance since he ran wild to give Tech the Interhigh title over Coolidge in 1947.

Terps Today Face Rugged Michigan St.

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

EAST LANSING, Mich., Oct. 6. A better Maryland team than the one which was beaten by a touchdown here last year, tomorrow hooks up with a better Michigan State team than the one which handed the Terps their only defeat of the 1949 season.

Which team has shown the most improvement will be determined beginning at 3 p. m. tomorrow, but tonight at least, it appeared that the Terps were stronger than last year when Maryland was a 33-point underdog. Tonight, the best the most enthusiastic Spartan cheer leader would offer was 13 points.

In this observer's book, Maryland will win by a touchdown after a bruising battle.

Michigan State is unbeaten. It cracked Oregon State in its opener and followed up last week with a stunning 14-7 victory over highly-regarded Michigan. Currently, it's the Nation's second ranking team.

Maryland, on the other hand, got its face slapped by Georgia three weeks ago but regained some of its lost prestige by winning handily from Navy last Saturday in the big Byrd Stadium dedication contest.

Munn Worried

Despite the enthusiasm and rabid confidence of the Spartan constituents hereabouts, Coach Biggie Munn was honestly worried about the outcome of tomorrow's Macklin Field struggle, which figures to attract a near capacity crowd in the neighborhood of 50,000.

"Frankly, I think Maryland is just as tough, if not tougher, than Michigan," Munn added.

Coach Jim Tatum of the Marylanders wouldn't put in with that line of talk at all.

"Our scouts say Michigan State is the best team in the country. I agree with them," Tatum added.

But there was a wry smile on Tatum when he said it, the same kind of smile he had on his face last January when he said Maryland didn't have much of a chance against Missouri in the 1950 Gator Bowl game. Maryland won going away, 20-7.

State Relies on Juniors, Sophs

The team the Spartans field tomorrow will be primarily composed of juniors and sophomores. The big threats are Halfback Sonny Grandelius, who engineered the defeat of Michigan; End Bob Carey, a 6-foot 5 inch 220-pounder who excels at pass catching; kickoffs, field goals and extra points; and Tackle Don Coleman, 190-pound junior whom many consider the best lineman in the Big Ten.

Washington Jets Beat New York

The Washington Jets led by the swift skating of Capt. Red Smartt and newly acquired Sid Harnesk made it two straight over the New York Chiefs, 25-22, before 4473 spectators at Uline Arena last night.

Both the Jets and Chiefs will play the third game of their current National Roller Derby series at Uline Arena tonight at 8:30 o'clock.

Wins Flag Tournament

Mrs. J. H. Chappel won the ladies' flag tournament at Army Navy golf course yesterday, finishing 15 feet from the pin on the eighteenth hole. Mrs. Frank Browning, 25 feet from the pin, was second.

Intercepted Pass Sets Up Touchdown

By Bill Gilbert

Big Bob Quinn, playing with an injured leg and a cut eye, scored a touchdown from 11 yards out on the first play of the fourth quarter as Wilson's Green Tigers tied McKinley Tech, 7-7, in an Interhigh League game yesterday at Wilson.

Then it was Center Dick Sebastian, specialist in conversions, who salvaged the tie with a placement.

Quinn, who didn't start the game because of his leg injury, set up the score himself late in the third period when he intercepted John Wage's pass on the Tech 34 and returned it 6 yards.

Quinn went through the middle for 2 yards, threw two incomplete passes, and then passed to Pete Haley for a first down on the 16.

Quinn again carried through the middle to the 11 and scored through the center.

Quinn cut his eye during the scoring drive.

A poor punt by Wilson's Cris King led to Tech's first quarter score. King punted out of bounds from his own 11 on his own 25.

Benny Colandreo carried twice to the 11 for a first down and Wege drove to the 4 on two successive plays. Colandreo then went over around end.

Bryant Hopkins booted the placement that was to save Tech from defeat.

Football Roundup

Miami Defeats Villanova; Okla. Aggies Tied by Drake

MIAMI, Fla., Oct. 6 (AP).—The University of Miami slithered and skidded through the rain and mud tonight to squeeze past tough Villanova, 18 to 12 before 35,294 football fans in the Orange Bowl.

Villanova rolled into a six-point lead in the first five minutes of play but Miami struck back to knot the count just before the quarter ended and was never headed.

Villanova tied the score again three minutes after the third quarter opened but again Miami skidded in front and stayed there with a gallant goal-line stand.

A bull-shouldered fullback named Pete D'Alonzo ripped the Miami line to shreds time after time, but with pay dirt in sight, he was set back four times inside the 4-yard line.

D'Alonzo engineered both Villanova touchdowns, the first with a dash around right end from the 4 after only 5 minutes of play.

Miami struck back when Frank Smith returned a Villanova kick to the 38. Smith rammed tackle for 4 and Bob Schneidenbach took Jack Hackett's pass all the way to the 1. Jack El Bello smashed over for the score that tied the game, 6-6. Gordon Watson's try for conversion failed.

Miami chalked up 16 first downs to Villanova's 11

DES MOINES, Oct. 6 (AP)—Drake battled Oklahoma A & M to a 14-all tie tonight in a slam-bang football game that opened the Missouri Valley Conference campaign for both teams.

The Aggies, 13-point favorites as a result of victories over Arkansas and Texas Christian, drove 58 yards for the deadlock after Drake had taken the lead on a 54-yard pass-run play featuring Halfback Johnny Bright and End Bob Binette early in the fourth period.

Bright, who entered the contest as the leading ground gainer in the Nation, pushed Drake into a 7-7 tie with a 23-yard touchdown sprint in the second period.

Wichita Rallies To Beat Detroit

DETROIT, Oct. 6 (AP).—Wichita, sparked by smooth-running Jimmy Nutter, pushed over two touchdowns in the final quarter for a 21 to 13 victory over University of Detroit tonight before 10,211 fans.

The Shockers won the hard way. They fought from behind twice before subduing Detroit, which suffered its first loss in three games this season.

Larsen Leads Western Over Stuyvesant, 21-0

Western High trounced Stuyvesant, of Warrenton, Va. 21-0 in Western's Stadium yesterday on the strength of some fancy running by Halfback Dale Larsen.

Western took a 7-0 lead on an off-tackle touchdown plunge by Howard Jenkins from the six yard line in the second quarter. Larsen set up the Red Raiders' second-period score with a 45-yard punt return to the Virginian's 20. Five plays later Paul Weinstein carried it over.

A screen pass Weinstein to Larson was good for 30 yards and the final touchdown of the game in the fourth quarter. Weinstein ran the extra point over the goal line.

Eastern Runs Over Roosevelt, 20-0

Sullivan, Sita, Set Up Three Rambler Scores

Jimmy Sullivan's long passes and Ralph Sita's hard running set up all three touchdowns as Eastern's Ramblers downed Roosevelt, 20-0, in an Interhigh game yesterday at Roosevelt.

The Ramblers' first score came in the closing minutes of the first quarter after Sullivan threw a long pass to Dick Ward, who broke away from two men and drove to the five. Eddie Marr smashed through center for the touchdown.

Eastern's second score came midway in the third period on a 50-yard drive sparked by Tom McHann, Marr and Sita drive to the one. Pat McDougall bulled his way through center for the touchdown. Dave Keyes kicked the extra point.

The Ramblers scored in the period when McHann faked a handoff and drove over from the 6. Keyes kicked his second extra point in three tries.

The closest Roosevelt came to the Eastern goal was in the fourth quarter when the Riders went 61 yards to the one. But the Riders, with a first down then fumbled and Spencer Limpiris recovered for Eastern.

Injured Roosevelt Back 'Satisfactory'

Irving Friedman, Roosevelt halfback injured on the next to last play of yesterday's game with Eastern, was in "satisfactory" condition last night at Emergency Hospital. Examination disclosed he was suffering from a pulled muscle in his neck.

Friedman, after intercepting a pass, seemed to land on his neck when he was tackled. He was carried from the field on a stretcher and it was feared he had broken his neck.

He was kept in the hospital overnight for observation.

Northwestern Favored Over Navy Today

BALTIMORE, Oct. 6 (AP).—Northwestern is coming East tomorrow for the first time in a decade and will take on Navy in an intersectional football contest.

Northwestern trimmed Iowa State, 23-13, last week and Navy lost to a rugged Maryland team, 35-21.

The Midwesterners are six-point favorites.

It will be the first college game played in Baltimore's new Memorial Stadium.

Both teams showed in their openers they can move along the ground. Northwestern piled up 303 yards rushing against Iowa State. Navy went for 108 against a high rated Maryland defense.

Three sophomores and a veteran are Navy's top ball carriers. Frankie Hauff showed improvement over last season while newcomers Fred Franco, Frank Adorney and Jack Wilner provided encouragement for Navy rooters.

Franco and Adorney are expected to get full opportunity to display their wares.

Navy still will have the passing

Briar White Beats Off Lightning Bug, Wins Feature Race at Bowie

Djinn Third; Daily Double Pays $558

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

BOWIE, Oct. 6.—Longshot and favorite players both had their innings on the Friday program at this turf point.

The moonshooters had a chance to shout when the daily double paid $558, but the chalk backers collected in the Dower House Purse, the day's outstanding event.

Mrs. W. W. Vaughan's Briar White, a handicap winner while campaigning at Atlantic City, turned in a front-running effort to take top money in the distance test.

Three parts of a length behind the son of Neddie came J. H. Miles' Lightning Bug, trying for her second victory of the meeting. Pentagon Stable's Djinn was third in the field of five.

A favorite throughout the betting, Briar White returned a $3.60 mutuel and stepped the mile and a sixteenth in 1:48 2-5. Again the weather was ideal and the crowd a slim 5408 with the World Series blamed for the lack of patronage.

Briar White earned $1800 for the less than two minutes of action and brought his season's total to $20,875.

The heft of the daily double payoff on the 4-and-10 combination was applied by Dutch King, owned by R. F. Dutcher, the son of Alaking jolted the talent by getting home at a $49.80 mutuel in the second race while under the handling of Burley Vandergriff.

The twin bet was started by D. A. Engel's Frankie D, which caused a mild surprise in winning the first event at an $11.80 mutuel. Bob Muszer put up a fine ride on the winner.

Leeds Riely, secretary of the Charles Town Jockey Club, won the fourth race with his Crystal Pass, a $4.40 favorite. However, he lost the horse, the son of Pass Out being claimed for $3500 by J. F. Glett.

Howard Loses Davis; Opposes Virginia Union

Howard has lost the services of its first string quarterback Ernie Davis for the season due to a leg injury, and has added freshman halfback Edward Neverson to the varsity for today's game with Virginia Union.

The 23-year-old 175-pound back from Armstrong has looked very impressive in scrimmages and will probably start along with Fullback Earl Greenfield, Quarterback Hal Davidson and Halfback Roger Goodson.

Virginia Union and Howard have each lost two. Game time is 2 p. m. at Howard Stadium.

Bolling Flyers Host Today to Selfridge Team

For the Washington area's first intersectional service game of the season today, former Oregon All-American Mike Mikulak will bring a squad from Selfridge AF Base, Detroit, to play the Bolling Flyers at 2:30 p. m. at Bolling.

Mikulak, who starred on Oregon teams for three years, is now a lieutenant colonel in the USAF.

The Selfridge team will have its hands full trying to stop Bolling's hard running Art Hage, 140-pound scatback, who raced for 75 yards in 20 attempts against the highly touted Quantico eleven.

The public is invited and no admission will be charged.

THERE GOES CILENTO—This time, in the third quarter, the hard-plunging GW back made eight yards behind Art Kojoyian (29) before he was hit by West Virginia's Stan McLaughlin.

The same Bob Cilento scored all of the Colonials' touchdowns in their rousing 21-14 victory over the Mountaineers last night at Griffith Stadium

Boys Clubs 11, 4 Play for Leads in Two Divisions

Tied for the lead in both the 120-pound and 140-pound divisions, undefeated teams from Police Boys Clubs No. 11 and No. 4 will clash today at Fairlawn Field in Anacostia.

Club No. 11, undefeated in 12 games including last season, will meet the 120-pound Club No. 4 at 11 a. m. on Fairlawn Field No. 1, while Clubs No. 10 and 12 will battle on Fairlawn No. 2.

The 140-pound teams from Clubs No. 11 and 4 will meet at 2:30 on No. 1 field, and Clubs No. 10 and 12 will compete on No. 2.

Bill Bennings Says:

DEAR FOLKS: At Bowie.

I'm sorry to pass on the news that the horse Cigar, winner for us in the first race opening day, had to be destroyed after breaking his left foreleg in a workout. Last spring Marie get was claimed from Guy Bedwell for $500 at Havre de Grace. Since changing barns the mare failed to win a buck. Bedwell claimed her back yesterday for $2500. Maybe he knows her "hole card." R. R. Dickman, Washington owner-trainer, shipped in five horses from Detroit, including Deluge, Alfadur, Fox Challenge, Brother Henry and War Story. The score-by-innings of the World Series is being given over the PA system here, but it looks like the baseball fans are sticking by their televisions. Naturally the track management is rooting for a short series. Good weekend card. See you on the rail.—BILL.

GW Wins, 21-14, Over W. Virginia

on a fumble by West Virginia's Jim Cornwall at the Mountaineer 30, and the Colonials were touchdown bound again.

From the 26, Davis hit Charlie Jones with a fourth down pass down the left side line, and Jones was nailed on the four. Then it was Cilento through the middle again, and GW was ahead, 20-14. Shullenberger wound up the scoring with another place kick.

It was GW's second straight Southern Conference victory, and the second loss in a row for West Virginia. The Colonials were slight favorites, but the Mountaineers deserve a lot of credit for the game they put up.

They were playing with a makeshift backfield with two of their regulars, Walter Glenn and Johnny Murphy on the casualty list. Billy Allen, regular quarterback, was moved to halfback, and Kent Bartges and Dick Loring, a couple of reserve quarterbacks, took over leadership of the West Virginia T magnificently.

Loring passed to Sophomore End Paul Bishoff for a 20-yard touchdown in the second quarter, and Dropkicker Gene Simmons converted to give the Mountaineers a 7-0 lead.

Early in the fourth quarter, Loring handed off neatly to reserve halfback Bill Lohr on a 12-yard touchdown play around left end to put West Virginia on top again, 13-7. Simmons again converted, and the stage was set for GW's comeback.

Shortly afterward, Loring was carried from the field on a stretcher, his right ankle fractured. He was taken to G. W. U. Hospital, and will remain there until tonight at least.

New Regulations Bring Additional Questions On Government Jobs

Scores of questions are being asked by Federal workers on the various decisions and orders issued recently that affect them. These are a few of the queries:

Q. I carried over 57 days of annual leave to this year. What's the maximum amount of leave I can carry over to 1951?

A. 60 days, or else you'll lose any over that amount. This is true despite the fact that the leave rider says that you have until next July 1 to take annual leave earned during this calendar year.

Q. I have 35 days of accumulated annual leave. Will I have to take it by next July 1 or forfeit it?

A. No. Annual leave acquired prior to January 1, 1950, is in no way affected by the leave rider and the comptroller's decision. However, you'll have to take leave earned this year by next July 1 or else you'll lose any part of it you fail to take.

Q. I understand the leave rider doesn't apply to either postal or to per diem employes. Is that correct?

A. No. The leave rider applies to all Federal employes.

Q. On January 1, I had 86 days of annual leave which was accumulated during the war years. I now have 97 days to my credit. How does the leave rider and the comptroller's decision affect my case?

Q. No effect whatever. The law will apply in your case. You can carry over a maximum of 86 days of leave at the end of this year and you'll lose any leave over that amount.

Q. Does the leave rider restrict sick as well as annual leave?

A. No. It deals with annual leave only.

Q. I have 26 years of Federal service to my credit. I expect to be reinstated to Government as I've been in private industry for several years. I have permanent status. What will my status be on reinstatement, and will I be under the Civil Service retirement system?

A. Your reinstatement will be on a temporary basis as provided under the Whitten rider. You'll retain your permanent status but you won't have it in any job you're reinstated to.

It's a good guess you'll be covered by the retirement system. This is the rule Civil Service has adopted. A former permanent status employe who is reinstated with an emergency indefinite appointment can be placed under the retirement system, or he can be covered by Social Security as of January 1. It's optional with the agency.

Incidentally, there are many similar questions on retirement coverage of emergency appointees. There are two other rules issued by Civil Service which will answer many of them:

1. If a person has never previously served in a position covered by the Retirement Act, he can't be placed under the act by an emergency indefinite appointment, and,

2. If a person serving in a position under the Retirement Act moves without a break in service to a new position where he is given an emergency indefinite appointment, it is mandatory that he stays under the Retirement Act.

Marine Kills Self After Plan to Wed Unwilling Girl Is Balked at Altar

Rockville Pastor Talks Serviceman Out of Marriage

A stormy, one-sided love affair, halted at the altar by the minister because of the girl's unwillingness to marry the man, ended yesterday in the suicide of a 21-year-old Marine, stationed here.

After threatening the minister with a knife, Pfc. Clyde Thompson put a bullet through his own head at the Naval Communications Station, 3801 Nebraska ave. nw. He died six hours later at Bethesda Naval Hospital.

Object of the youth's affection was Helen Johns, 19-year-old stenographer of 1350 Fairmont st. nw., who told the minister the Marine had courted her since they met at a dance a few months ago.

After futile attempts to persuade her to marry him, Miss Johns said, Thompson came to her home Thursday night and threatened to kill her unless she wed him immediately.

Went to Rockville

The terrified Miss Johns accompanied the Marine, who carried a Montgomery County marriage license, issued only a few hours earlier, to the home of Dr. William B. Adams, pastor of the Rockville Baptist Church, at 17 South Washington st. in Rockville.

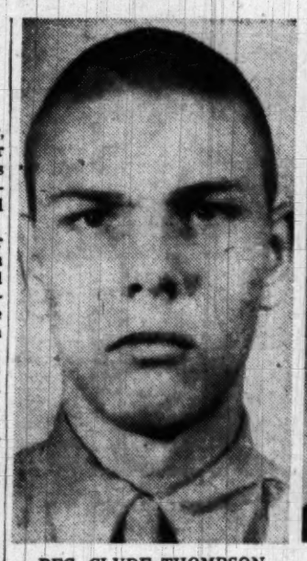
Dr. Adams, a former Army chaplain, said he noted the disturbed condition of the couple—the Marine "was in a crazed condition"—and talked with them a half hour, explaining to the Marine that this was not the time for marriage. Thompson, the minister said, told him he could not live without the girl.

Finally Dr. Adams got them on their way back to the waiting cab, "walking between them in order to give her protection."

"While they were in the house," the minister said, "I observed that the Marine was wearing cowboy boots and I was suspicious he might be concealing a weapon. I expected something to happen any instant."

As they neared the taxi, the minister said, Thompson pulled a knife from his boot.

"I thought at first he was pulling a gun," the minister said, "so I moved in close to him, where there was more chance grappling than there would be outrunning a bullet. I was afraid, too, that he was going to shoot the girl.



PFC. CLYDE THOMPSON
. . . unhappy in love

DR. WILLIAM B. ADAMS
. . . stopped wedding

"When I saw it was a knife I waited to see what he would do. The boy took a pose of suicide by placing the knife on his throat. I told the girl to go back in the house."

The Marine got in the cab and left. The minister followed the girl back to the house, where Mrs. Adams had meanwhile called police.

Taking another taxi, Dr. Adams and the girl went to the Tenth precinct station in Washington. The minister said he was fearful that if the Marine did not commit suicide he might return to the girl's residence.

Miss Johns told the minister that she had moved once, since coming here from Frackville, Pa., to get away from the Marine. He threatened to kill her unless she married him, he said.

Assigned as Guard

Later Assistant United States Attorney Martin F. McNamara disclosed that Miss Johns came to see him five weeks ago and related these threats. She said she wanted to be left alone. McNamara summoned the Marine, who promised he wouldn't annoy her any more.

Leaving the minister's house, the Marine went to the Naval Communications Station, where he was assigned to guard duty.

Corpl. Richard A. Seidel and Pfc. John J. Courtney said they were sitting in the security room when Thompson burst in. He went directly to a cabinet, they said, took out a .45 automatic pistol, slipped in a clip.

When Seidel started to get out of his chair, Thompson pointed the gun at him and said: "You're not going to take this gun away from me." Seidel asked what the matter was.

Thompson pulled the marriage license from his pocket and said: "That's what's the matter."

Then he pointed the pistol at his temple and pulled the trigger. The time was about 8 p. m. He died at 2:15 a. m.

Miss Johns is employed as a stenographer at the Society of American Military Engineers in the Mills Building, 17th st. and Pennsylvania ave. nw.

Naval authorities said Thompson enlisted in the Marines in March, 1948. After training at Parris Island, S. C., and Quantico, he was assigned here last July.

His record showed that the Marine was the son of Mrs. Rosie Thompson Evans, of Shreveport, La., where his body, accompanied by a Navy escort, will be sent.

Quickest Route From Bethesda Hospital To Downtown Area Takes 34 Minutes

Have you wondered whether you are taking the quickest route to work? TRAFFIC TRICKS, recommended routes developed from the Regional Highway Planning Survey of Metropolitan Washington, has the answer on the fast way to get to the Capitol or the 14th st. and Pennsylvania ave. nw intersection.

RESIDENTS of Maplewood, Alta Vista, Wyngate, Glenbrook Village, the Naval Medical Center, National Health Institutes and Georgetown Preparatory School sections of Maryland should take this route—

The average peak traffic time is 34.3 minutes for the 11.8 mile distance. From the starting intersection, it should take 8.8 minutes to the D. C. line.

If you prefer, turn left off the parkway onto Virginia ave. and then into Constitution, but surveys indicate this is no time saver. Remember that Waterside dr. is one-way northbound from 4 to 6:30 p. m.

Strike Ends As Plumbers Get 25c Hike

W. M. & A. Drivers, Belvoir Carpenters Remain Idle Despite Mediation Efforts

AFL plumbers here yesterday ended a five-day strike after winning their demand for a 25-cent-an-hour increase in pay.

There was no peace progress made, however, in the strikes of the W. M. & A. bus drivers and of the AFL carpenters at Fort Belvoir.

The Plumbing Contractors Association of Washington agreed to the terms asked by Local 5, United Association of Plumbers and Pipefitters. The union, with some 450 members, asked for $2.75 an hour pay and a one-year contract running to September 1, 1951.

The employers had offered 15 cents an hour for the first year of a two-year contract, plus 15 cents more the second year. The contractors had also offered to arbitrate the wage demand. The union, however, held out for the 25 cents, and yesterday won the strike. The plumbers return to work Monday morning.

For a second day, Federal conciliation efforts failed to break the strike of AFL drivers and mechanics on the W. M. & A. bus lines, operating between Prince Georges County and Washington. The union employes are on strike in protest against the discharge of a driver. The strike is due to continue into its fourth day today.

The strike of AFL carpenters at Fort Belvoir, in protest against working with non-union carpenters on the reservation, passed through its ninth day yesterday without any prospect of peace before next week.

3 Arrested In Attempted Holdup Case

Three men who, police say, stole an automobile and then tried to hold up a Washington filling station, were held for grand jury action yesterday by Municipal Court Judge George D. Neilson.

The men, who are being held under $5000 bond on charges of attempted robbery and unauthorized use of an automobile, are William Leo Dwyer, 26, of 3224 M st. nw.; Edward F. Howard, 27, of 503 3d st. nw., and Edward E. Wallace, 28, of 2111 Washington cle. nw.

Police said a car owned by Douglas S. MacKall, 449 Decatur st. nw., owner of a tavern at the corner of Wisconsin ave. and Prospect st. nw., was stolen Wednesday at about midnight from a parking lot near the tavern.

Subsequently, they said, the men went to see a brother of Dwyer, borrowed his .22 caliber rifle with the understanding they were going squirrel hunting, and headed for a gas station at 448 Maryland ave. sw.

Police said Dwyer sat in the car and Howard, holding the rifle and wearing a mask, and Wallace walked into the station. They said Howard held the gun on Simpson Poythress, station manager, and demanded money.

Before Poythress handed over any money, however, Dwyer blew the horn, the agreed upon warning signal, and the men left. An assistant manager was approaching the station, police said.

Police got on the track of the men, they said, when Mackall remembered seeing Dwyer in his tavern shortly before the car was taken from the parking lot. All three were arrested in their homes. Dwyer implicated the others in the crimes, according to police.

Takoma Opens 33d Flower Show Today

Registration of entries will be held on Saturday from 9:30 a. m. to 12 noon, and judging begins at 12:30 p. m. Show opens to the public at 2:30 p. m. Awards will be presented at 7:30 p. m. on Sunday.

Especially When They Wrestle

Monkeys Aren't Cwaziest People—But They're Cutest

By Bill Brinkley
Post Reporter

SEVEN BABY specimens of the third smartest animal on earth—ranked only by us humans and gorillas, in that order—arrived yesterday to give the Zoo one of its biggest attractions since Noah came out of the Ark.

We didn't know it before but baby chimpanzees love to wrestle. If you've never seen baby chimps rassle, you ain't seen nothin'.

Our advice is: Stop whatever you're doing, rush right out to the Zoo and treat your funny muscles to a 180-proof bender.

The chimps, 2 to 3 years old and weighing about 12 pounds each, took over the Zoo from the moment they arrived from Johns Hopkins Hospital, where they have been furthering their education in laboratory duty.

AS EACH was let out of his individual crate into the cage, he was greeted by brother chimps who had preceded him.

This took the form of nonstop half-nelsons, hair pulling, ear flipping, nose grabbing, muscle feeling, all in a playful baby mood.

One chimp tried to climb the fireman's pole and another grabbed his leg and hauled him down.

Another chimp slid like lightning down the pole and landed with a crash on the head of another below.

The chimps threw each other to the mat in motions that made us swear they had taken wrestling lessons from Gorgeous George. Three chimps settled on their bottoms and took up a perfect artist's models pose of "See No Evil, Hear No Evil, Speak No Evil."

KEEPERS SEE a lot of animals so that their humor boiling point on their traits is sometimes higher than that of laymen. But you should have heard Keeper Roy L. Jackson chuckle.

"Just like children!" Jackson kept exclaiming. He promptly named one pot-bellied one Cheetah for the famous chimp.

Betwixt cadenzas in their jam sessions the chimps had bananas, their favorite delicacy, and sucked out the insides of orange rinds, their second favorite.

The wrestling went on for hours. It's a fabulous show. From now on some of our best friends are chimps. What wonderful facial expressions they have, too. Some of them looked just like certain of our other best friends among the No. 1 smartest animal on earth.

Falls Church School Plans Get Setback

Inflation May Force Dropping of Proposed Elementary School

Falls Church "might have to consider" scrapping its plans for a new elementary school because of rising construction costs, School Superintendent Irvin H. Schmitt said yesterday.

The City School Board rejected all bids Wednesday for construction of the four-classroom school. Reason: the lowest bid—$156,000—was $51,000 higher than the board had expected.

Along with a new high school, the elementary school was to have been financed from proceeds of a $700,000 school bond issue voted a year ago, plus about $40,000 in State aid.

The new high school, regarded as the board's "most urgent" project, would have 10 classrooms, a library, and a combined auditorium-gymnasium.

Schmitt says he hopes the high school building can be erected for about $600,000. But when bids are opened on the job November 14, higher construction costs may raise that price, too, he warned.

That would leave the School Board with three choices, according to Schmitt. It could: (1) Request new bids on the elementary school job, (2) scrap plans for the elementary school and go ahead with the high school, or (3) "find some other means of raising the funds."

The city currently operates only one school—the Madison Elementary. Two other schools, Falls Church High and the Oak Street Elementary, are operated by Fairfax County within the city limits.

Subsidy Restored

Arlington's School Meal Prices Cut

On Monday, Arlington's school cafeterias again will offer a 25-cent lunch, thanks to return of the Federal school lunch subsidy.

Since the schools opened this fall, the full lunch has been selling for 35 cents in absence of the subsidy. During the 1949-50 school year, the 25-cent subsidy lunch had been in effect.

This year Federal funds were not available until now because of a congressional delay in passing an appropriation bill.

Monday's 25-cent lunch will include two ounces of meat or another protein food, vegetables or fruit, bread, butter, milk, and a small dessert.

Federal lunch subsidy is only 5 cents per pupil, school officials said, but donations of Federal surplus commodities help shrink the luncheon price. Last week more than 5000 pounds of butter and 1050 pounds of cheese were received free by Arlington schools from the Government surplus commodity program.

Arlington Lung Sufferer Ordered to Hospital

A 39-year-old Arlington tuberculosis sufferer was ordered to report for treatment at the Perry Point, Md., Veterans Hospital after he was convicted in Arlington County Court yesterday of failing to submit to medical care.

The charge against Marion C. Hills, 2747 S. Meade st., was filed after Hills "willfully" refused to follow the instructions of the County Health Department, according to the warrant. Hills also was given a six-month suspended sentence.

Veterans Jamboree 'President' Held on Beer-Selling Charge

An Alexandrian and his wife, arrested Thursday night on charges of operating a grocery store and selling beer without licenses, were released yesterday on bonds totaling $1250.

Investigators said Jasper L. McBride, 40, of 1201 Duke st., self-styled president of the Veterans Jamboree, and his wife, Mrs. Mary L. McBride, 34, were selling beer on the first floor of the Duke street address, and operating a grocery below.

Two charges of selling alcoholic beverages were placed against Mrs. McBride and one against McBride. He also was charged with operating a business without a license, and evading an Alexandria ordinance prohibiting sale of cigarettes without paying a city tax.

He was released on $750 bond and Mrs. McBride on $500 bond.

M. K. Byrant, a Virginia State Alcoholic Beverage Control investigator, said McBride was operating "an after hours cracker and sardine store."

Bryant said McBride accounted for the lack of licenses by explaining that the business was operated by the Veterans Jamboree of which he, McBride, is president. Applications for a charter for the Veterans Jamboree has been made to the city of Alexandria, but not granted.

McBride, a linotype operator, said the store was open only to card-carrying members of the Veterans Jamboree, who came in and got what they wanted and made a "donation," but Bryant said that on three occasions his agents, not even veterans, had made purchases, including beer. Nothing was said about donations, Bryant said. They were cash transactions, according to the official.

Two cases of beer were confiscated for evidence, Bryant said. The case is slated to go before the Alexandria Police Court on October 17.

ICC Report Favors 15c Transit Fare To Pentagon

Examiner Supports 5-Cent Increase, 3 Tokens for 40c, Joint Fare Ticket

An increase from 10 cents to 15 cents in the cash fare for bus trips between the District and Government buildings in the Pentagon area was recommended yesterday by an Interstate Commerce Commission examiner.

Also recommended was establishment of a 13 1/3-cent token fare, at the rate of 3 tokens for 40 cents. At present, only the straight cash fare of 10 cents is provided by the two bus lines serving the nearby Virginia buildings.

Would Affect 17,000

Affected by the fare increase, if it is approved by the ICC, will be an estimated 17,000 commuters to the Pentagon, Arlington Navy Annex, Air Force Annex, Army and Air Force buildings at Gravelly Point, and National Airport.

Examiner H. C. Lawton said his recommendations in this case are technically a "proposed report," which normally is approved by the ICC if there are no objections from interested parties. It differs from an examiner's order, which goes into effect without action by the ICC if there no objections.

Lawton said there was no evidence of "changed conditions" which would warrant discontinuing the joint fare. "To the contrary," he declared, "it appears that substantial increases in personnel at the Government installations are impending."

Increase Previously Asked

The 15-cent rate was asked by the two Virginia bus lines, Alexandria, Barcroft & Washington Transit Co. and Washington, Virginia & Maryland Coach Co. (Arnold Lines) in hearings held before Lawton last July.

The two Virgina lines and Capital Transit also asked the ICC to determine a reasonable division of the joint fare, if continued and increased. However, Examiner Lawton said the question of the shares should be left to the carriers.

Under the present 16-cent joint fare, Capital Transit receives 7 cents and the Virginia companies receive 9 cents from each ticket.

Both Virginia lines obtained increases in their intrastate fares, and Arnold Lines in its interstate fares, other than the "Pentagon fare," earlier this year. The A. B. & W.'s interstate fare increase is pending.

Examiner Lawton found that "it is not at all certain" that these increases will provide operating ratios expected earlier to offset mounting expenses and declining traffic.

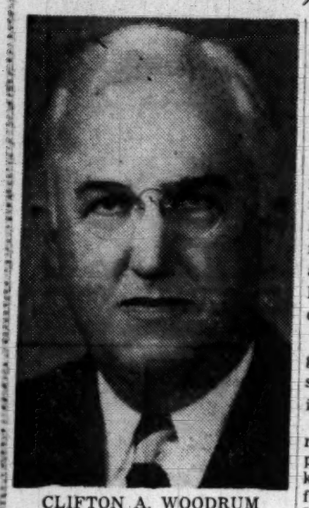
Ex-Congressman Woodrum, 63, Dies



CLIFTON A. WOODRUM
. . . dead at 63

Former Representative Clifton A. Woodrum, 63, who represented Virginia's Sixth District for 23 years, died yesterday at about 6 a. m. folowing a heart attack in his apartment here.

The onetime pharmacist, lawyer and judge attended a business meeting Thursday night and appeared in good health just a few hours before he was stricken at 5 a. m. in his General Scott Hotel room. He was pronounced dead by Dr. S. A. Thomas.

Since his retirement from Congress in 1945, Mr. Woodrum has served as president of the American Food Plant Council, Inc.

Congressman Woodrum, former ranking member of the House Appropriations Committee, was known for his persistent demands for economy. A conservative Democrat, Mr. Woodrum frequently was at odds with the Roosevelt Administration.

Mr. Woodrum headed the Select House Committee on Post Military Policy—one of his last assignments before retiring to private life—and was an enthusiastic supporter of universal military training. Colleagues remember Woodrum as one who never was afraid to speak out on any issue on which he felt strongly.

A native of Roanoke, Mr. Woodrum's family financial diffculties forced him to start work at the age of 13. He was an errand boy, "soda jerker" and, through part-time schooling, became a registered pharmacist. He studied law at Washington and Lee University and was admitted to the bar in 1908.

Mr. Woodrum began his political career by becoming Commonwealth's attorney at Roanoke in 1917. Two years later he was named judge of Hustings Court in Roanoke. He resigned in 1922 to enter Congress.

He was a Thirty-third degree Mason.

War Problems Are Discussed By Educators

By Elsie Carper
Post Reporter

A thousand representatives of colleges, universities and educational organizations yesterday considered ways to mobilize the Nation's schools for "the long period of tension with the forces of communism."

Facing the educators was this problem: Would all-out effort by the schools in the present emergency dissipate the energies and talents needed by the country for a "long-term test of strength?"

The educators, called to the conference by the American Council on Education, turned their attention to policies governing the drafting of students, and the draining off into Government service of faculty members, particularly highly trained scientists.

Effect of Policies Weighed

They weighed the effects of such policies on future "pools" of skilled and educated citizens, "needed in a democracy," and the possible slackening of universities' scientific research programs.

The two day conference at the Chamber of Commerce Auditorium opened with a panel of speakers. In the afternoon the educators gathered in "closed" group sessions with Government officials. The conference will meet again today in open session at 2 p. m. to adopt reports and resolutions.

Yesterday morning the delegates heard Maj. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, Selective Service Didector, indorse a plan that would defer students who show marked capabilities.

Dr. McGrath's Views

Dr. Earl James McGrath, Commissioner of Education, called for such a program in his address.

He said that if the draft is extended tot 18-year-olds it would be "essential to the national welfare" to "make strenuous efforts to get our best young brains into institutions of higher education."

The selected youths should remain in school "until they have been educated to take their crucial place in military or civilian activities whichever the needs of the Nation then require," the speaker said. He added this could be accomplished only by Government scholarships and "a wise deferment policy."

Warning by Clark

Robert L. Clark, director of the manpower office of the National Security Resources Board, warned the schools "should not divert their attention totally to the specific needs of industry and Government, but continue to give emphasis to the great traditional role of the university—investigating and teaching in all significant fields of human knowledge."

J. Thomas Schneider, chairman of the Defense Department's personnel policy board, said the armed services are looking for trained personnel.

"The military forces today are made up of specialists. We are not getting these specialists through the induction centers," he explained.

Group Health Urges Buying Of Building

Trustees of the Group Association last night urged purchase of the Arlington Building at 1025 Vermont ave. nw., and asked the membership to approve assessments ranging from $30.40 to $71.20.

The proposed assessments, which would be spread over a three-year period, would cover a down payment of $150,000, remodeling expenses of $163,000, $23,000 in moving and other costs, and $74,000 to repay present obligations.

The approximately 500 members present at the meeting, held in the Department of the Interior Auditorium, appeared to be generally in favor of the purchase.

Method of Financing

The numerous questions asked after the officers explained the proposal, however, centered on the method of financing the $410,000 needed by assessment.

A resolution which would have directed the trustees to provide members with evidence of ownership or equity in the building was changed to a resolution asking the trustees to consider such a plan.

The purchase and assessment proposal will be balloted on by mail by the 8000 voting members of the health cooperative. Ballots must be in GHA headquarters by the close of business October 21.

GHA President William E. Warne, Medical Director Dr. Henry Lichtenberg, Albert Waterston, chairman of the building committee and board member, Melvin Dollar, executive director, urged the purchase for the greater efficiency it would provide.

Quarters Unsatisfactory

All said none of the present quarters occupied by GHA, at the Arlington buliding, at 1328 I st. nw. and at 2529 Pennsylvania ave. nw., is completely satisfactory. The locations are so scattered, they said, that the time and services of the medical staff are being wasted.

Construction of a new building was considered until recently, when sharply rising costs of construction and threat of shortages made the plan dubious, it was stated.

The assessments would be payable at the rate of $5 a month for each member for the first two months, beginning November 1. After that, the charge would be 60 cents a month for a single member, $1.30 for a membership with two participants, $1.60 for a membership with three, and $1.80 for four or more. These payments would run for 34 months.

Under the plan, Group Health would occupy six of the 10 floors of the Arlington building, and rent the other four. This would allow for increase of the present 19,000 participants to about 30,000, officials said.

Henry Gilligan Dies; Lawyer, Civic Leader

Henry Gilligan, 69, a member of the District Board of Education from 1926 to 1937, died yesterday at Sibley Hospital after a heart attack.

Mr. Gilligan

Mr. Gilligan was an attorney and lived at 2304 1st st. nw. He became ill Sunday and had been under treatment at the hospital since.

A prominent figure in the Rhode Island Methodist Church here, Mr. Gilligan for years conducted an adult Sunday School session known as the Gilligan Bible Class. He also served as president of the church's official board, was church organist and choirmaster.

Mr. Gilligan had been a Washington resident since 1916 and had been in law practice here.

He was a member of the District Bar Association, a member and former president of the North Capitol Citizens Association, a past master of the Benjamin B. French Mason Lodge. He also served on the Physical Education Committee of the YMCA.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Bessie Hawse Gilligan, two daughters, Mrs. Clarence H. Bennett of the First st. address and Mrs. Lester W. Harris of 45 Franklin st. ne., a brother and a sister.

Funeral services will be held at 2 p.m. Monday at the Rhode Island Avenue Methodist Church. Burial will be in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

'Curley' Byrd Has His Day At Crisfield

CRISFIELD, Md., Oct. 6 (AP).—This Eastern Shore town turned out in full force today to pay homage to its No. 1 native son.

The guest of honor, who liked the idea so well he arrived two hours ahead of schedule, was the famous athlete of yesterday and college president of today, Dr. H. C. (Curley) Byrd.

The University of Maryland president got "Curley Byrd Day" started by telling the 1000 Crisfield elementary and high school students how it was when he went to school here.

He related how he walked two or three miles to an old frame school house in the section called "Byrdtown" . . . walking outside to a bucket of water for drinks of water . . . the rickety old seats.

These conditions he compared with the great improvements in educational facilities. Then the educator—credited with developing a State agricultural school into one of the country's leading universities—sprung his text:

"Success depends on your willingness to work," he declared, "and many of the greatest opportunities lie within the borders of your own home town."

Dr. Byrd was feted at a large testimonial dinner tonight, where special greetings came from the surviving classmates of his high school class of 1905. All were present except A. Wellington Tawes, brother of State Comptroller J. Millard Tawes, who was confined by illness.

The Byrd family was one of the first on the Eastern Shore, settling at Crisfield in the 1600's.

Dr. Byrd first gained fame on the football fields of the old Maryland Agricultural College, Western Maryland and Georgetown. He tried pitching professional baseball for several years, but came back to the State to coach at his alma mater after his arm gave out.

He steppel into the president's chair in 1935 after serving as coach and English instructor, vice president and acting president.

50 Huk Rebels Killed

MANILA, P. I., Oct. 6 (U.P.).—Fifty Huk rebels were killed in an all-night battle with army troops in the mountains 25 miles north of Manila, the national defense department said today. Government casualties were said to be three wounded.

R. W. Goodrick Dies Following Long Illness

Richard W. Goodrick, sr., 65, a Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service commissioner since 1942, died in Georgetown Hospital last night following a long illness.

A native of Washington, Mr. Goodrick was educated here and before entering Government service was employed as business agent for the Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butchers Workmen of America. Previously he was employed nine years as district supervisor of Safeway Stores, then the Sanitary chain.

His home was at 441 N. Nelson st., Arlington.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Emma V. Goodrick; three sons and two daughters. They are Wilson D. Goodrick of Milford, Del.; Richard, jr. of 22 Old Glebe rd., Arlington; Forrest S. Goodrick of 1936 38th st. nw.; Mrs. Paul E. Roberson, 616 N. Jackson st., Arlington; and Mrs. J. A. Henricksen of 4621 Wheeler rd. se.

Pending completion of funeral arrangements, the remains are at the Ives Funeral Home, Arlington.

Executive Plan Gets Support In Mt. Vernon

The Mount Vernon District Business and Industrial Association of Fairfax County last night indorsed a change-over to the county executive form of government in a county referendum November 7.

The group voted at a special meeting at the Penn-Daw Hotel after hearing talks in favor of the county executive plan by David Lawrence, Washington columnist, and Lewis Travis, Chantilly farmer. Both were members of the 21-member government study commission which recently recommended adoption of the executive form.

Members of the association first favored a change from the present form of Government in a voice vote which brought a few scattered "no's". The vote was unanimous, however, when they were asked to choose between the executive form and the county manager plan.

Lawrence likened the appointive powers granted a county manager to a dictatorship.

Under the county executive system, the board of supervisors would share admnistrative responsibility with a county executive, Lawrence said. "This is the way all big corporations work with the directors, president and other officials sharing responsibility," he said.

The county executive system, providing for election of six supervisors by voters within their respective districts, would permit each district to be represented by a candidate of its own choosing, he said.

Travis contended at-large election of the six supervisors as provided by the county manager form would give control of the governing body to a small "clique."

He predicted increased spending with an eventual increase in property taxes if the county manager plan is installed.

Man Held in Sex Case

William B. Cattell, 71, 3609 Brothers pl. se., was held under $2000 bond for the grand jury yesterday, charged with a sex offense September 16. He was arrested after the mother of an eight-year-old girl complained to the police.

Father Gets 2-10 Years on Morals Count

The former District manager of an insurance company was sentenced yesterday to serve from two to ten years in jail, after pleading guilty to a charge of incest.

He is Don MacDonald, 39 of 4200 Chesapeake st. nw., who was employed by the Bankers Life and Casualty Co., 1835 K st. nw., at a salary of $18,000 a year.

MacDonald was arrested in July after his 18-year-old daughter told police she had had sexual relations with him.

In sentencing MacDonald, District Court Judge Edward A. Tamm said he had received many pleas to put the defendant on probation.

"I am greatly concerned," he said, "about the statement of the doctor who examined the defendant and who said that the man is in need of intensive psychotherapy.

"But the court does not feel that it would be proper to release the defendant on probation."

In other sentences yesterday, three gamblers were ordered to start serving previously imposed sentences of from one to three years each for operating a big-time crap game at 2730 Woodley pl. nw.

They are Theodore J. (Little Joe) Scheve, 31, of 2521 34th pl. se., Hyman Rosen, 41, of 1616 Isherwood st. nw., and Herman (The Judge) Kadan, 46, proprietor of the Woodley pl. dice game.

The three, plus Joseph H. (Big Joe) Scheve, were convicted last year, but had been on bail pending appeal. The Court of Appeals unheld their conviction in August. Big Joe was murdered December 10, 1949, in a pool hall by an associate, James A. Rigsbee, 35, now in jail for the crime.

Four youths accused of operating the slickest auto theft ring in years pleaded guilty in District Court.

They are John Edgar Smith, 26, of 3935 Georgia ave. nw., who was arrested in Miami, Fla.; Charles W. Pastros, 22, of 7212 Flower ave., Takoma Park, Md.; Leo C. Condolon, 22, of 1901 Roanoke st., Green Meadows, Md., and Richard B. Riggin, 22, of the Georgia ave., address.

Driver Is Rescued From Gas-Filled Cab of His Truck

A gasoline truck driver who was pulled from the carbon monoxide-filled cab of his truck early yesterday by fellow workers was reported in good condition last night at Prince Georges General Hospital.

The driver, James Boland, 34, of 2356 Belleview ave., Cheverly, was found unconscious in his truck parked at the Coastal Tank Lines, 1913 Olive st., Kenilworth, about 3:45 a. m. when he was called to begin his truck run.

Fellow workers said he had parked the truck about midnight and decided to take a nap until time to go out. The motor and heater were running, they said.

The cab was locked, and Boland's rescuers, M. W. Harrison, night mechanic, and John L. Morrison, another driver, had to force the door.

Special prayers in honor of the Blessed Mother for restoration of peace in the world will be offered at the conclusion of the 8 a. m. mass in the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception at the Catholic University each morning during October, the Rt. Rev. Msgr. Patrick J. O'Connor, acting director of the shrine, announced yesterday.

The masses will be celebrated by Monsignor O'Connor.

$11,311 Thefts At Meade Get Man 2 Years

Morris D. Fisher, 42, a former civilian official at Fort George G. Meade, yesterday was sentenced to serve two years in Federal prison for embezzling $11,311 in Government funds.

Sentence was imposed in Baltimore by Federal Judge W. Calvin Chestnut. Fisher, who had been employed as an automobile salesman, lives at 707 Somerset pl. nw.

Judge Chestnut denied Fisher's request for probation in order to make restitution and stated that the "public interest required imprisonment."

Fisher was acting as chief of management in the office of the post engineer at Fort Devens when the money was embezzled between April 1, 1948, and July 1, 1949, from rental and utility payments of civilian residents of Meadedale, a housing project on the post.

Good Grooming Habits Last

FOR PARTIES Linda selects a shirtwaist variation, in cotton with the sheen of taffeta, with a graceful, fulled-on skirt featuring many rows of self tucks

By Ann Lawrence

Final day of Linda's beauty series

LINDA'S PROBLEM of finding dresses that "don't make me look 22" or "aren't kid stuff" is one of the most common dilemma's of the just-turned-teen girl.

However, there are designers today who do recognize this problem and whose entire collection consists of "young teen" clothes, sized and designed to fit the teen-age taste and figure.

Two such outfits were selected for Linda. They are Jack Borgenicht designs.

Linda was concerned with hemlines. Should she continue to wear her dresses above the knees, as she did in grammar school, or was the down-to-the-ankle lengths she'd seen last year on the older girls more appropriate.

WELL, GROUND-HUGGING skirts are out this season for all ages, so she needn't worry with that problem. In a three-way huddle with Linda and her mother, we decided that dresses or skirts about 2½ inches below her knees were most becoming and appropriate.

What about socks and stockings, she wanted to know? Would she need stockings with below-the-knees hemlines.

No, not for school. With the simple cotton and three-piece corduroy suit chosen for Linda, short bobby socks seemed in better taste. Loafers and moccasins are her standard schoolwear shoes and look well with cotton dresses, wool or corduroy skirts.

STOCKINGS FOR PARTIES? When she's wearing a 1-inch heel ballet-cut pump? With any heel at all, yes, stockings. And for thin young legs, as yet uncurved, there's a new "fluted" stocking on the market which will fit the teen-ager with nary a wrinkle. Because of the "flutes," which appear in the hand like ribs or pleats, the stocking is only half the size of an ordinary pair of hose when it is off. When it is slipped on, it stretches out to the exact size and shape of the individual wearer's leg, and does away with unsightly wrinkles and sags.

Thirteen is the threshold of the teens, a turning point in any young girl's life. It is the time when she should begin to form the good habits of beauty and grooming, shopping and budgeting, the good habits of everyday living that will remain with her all her life.

Organize to Meet War Emergency

Women's Groups Set Up 'Clearing House' for Defense

By Norma Lanum

VIRTUALLY all organized units of American women—from the religious groups to the trade unions, from the professional societies to the service clubs—banded together yesterday in a central "clearing house" for civil defense.

At an all-day meeting at the Statler Hotel, representatives of 32 national women's groups lay groundwork for a "nucleus committee" which would advise and assist Government agencies in civilian mobilization.

The fact that the Government welcomed and in fact, needed their assistance was brought out early in the meeting by two representatives of the National Security Resources Board, the Government agency charged with mapping out a general civil defense program.

Mrs. Martha Sharp, special adviser on women's affairs to Stuart Symington, chairman of the NSRB, and Miss Catherine Falvey, an attorney in the office of the general counsel of the NSRB, assured women that the agency recognized their vital role in defense planning.

MRS. SHARP told the women they needn't wait, however, until they are given a specific task within the framework of the civil defense program. Every woman should learn first aid in preparation for a possible disaster, the meeting was advised.

Mrs. Ruth Freeman, nursing consultant to the NSRB, said all women should get some nursing training, as well. In the event of a bombing, she explained, women might have to nurse the injured in their own homes, or in the homes of the neighbors. "We can't depend on the professional nurses in time of disaster," she said.

"These are skills which you will need in addition to other training within the network of the defense program. And when the chips are down you may have to take two jobs," she warned.

THEIR JOBS would go much farther than nursing and first aid if this country is bombed, however. This point was emphasized by Lady Reading, chairman and organizer of the Women's Volunteer Services in England.

Tall, stately Lady Reading told the clubwomen of the relentless bombing of London during World War II.

They evacuated children, cared for the injured, helped feed and clothe the homeless, and took over the countless small tasks required to preserve the regularity of day-to-day living.

"You just can't imagine all the little jobs!" she said. "Whenever there was a night raid the first two things people would lose would be false teeth and spectacles. We'd have to replace them so the people could go to work the next day."

LADY READING attributed much of the success of her organization to its simplicity. There was no rank, she said. Each woman had her own specific jobs to do. That was all.

Lady Reading assured the club leaders that the American women would assume their responsibilities in a volunteer program, just as the British women did, the moment they see that they are needed. Show them how they can fit into the whole picture of the civil defense program, and they'll serve.

It is very important, however, that a volunteer have spiritual strength to stick to her job and see it through. "The first attack is nothing! It's after the 50th or 60th that the going gets tough."

Lady Reading will soon return to London to launch a new program, the recruiting of more women volunteers of her own organization.

Earlier Col. Mary Hallaren, director of the Women's Army Corps, stressed the critical need for women in the military services in time of national emergency.

All the services are increasing their strengths to meet immediate needs, she reported. Toward the end of World War II the Army didn't have the women volunteers it needed. And in the present crisis she anticipates a shortage of woman to fill the jobs necessary to a full mobilization.

The colonel appealed to the club leaders to take home with them the real need of women in the services.

Miss Sylvia Gottlieb, representing the Communications Workers of the CIO, then asked Colonel Halloren:

"Can the women in industry who leave their work to volunteer in the service be guaranteed job security on their return?"

The colonel said they could not, but that such guarantees certainly were needed.

MISS MARGARET HICKEY, former president of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, Inc., gave the keynote address.

It was Mrs. Hickey who first suggested this meeting of representatives from all women's groups in her speech at the BPW's meeting last spring.

Yesterday she said the time has come for American women to recognize their responsibility as citizens and to form a full partnership with men in the obligations of civil defense.

Also she advised the women to break through the "sheer machinery of the organizations" which sometimes presents concrete action in emergencies.

AS THE MEETING drew to a cloes, this very same complex machinery of the organizations represented almost threw a wrench in the gears of their plans.

A few of the women were reluctant to vote on the major issues of the meeting until the boards of their various groups could review them. Others complained that their groups had not been given adequate representation.

As the meeting continued into overtime, however, members agreed to make their group a continuing body to serve as a "clearing house" of women's organizations on problems of national defense.

In addition, they appointed a temporary steering and planning committee within the group to "channel information."

Mrs. Hiram Houghton, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, was named chairman of the steering committee which includes the General Federation and 13 other national organizations. She said she would call a meetng of the group in "about three weeks."

Other member organizations are the American Association of University Women; Associated Women of the American Farm Bureau Federation, League of Women Voters of the United States, National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, National Board of the Young Women's Christian Association, National Council of Catholic Women, National Council of Jewish Women, United Council of Church Women, National Associated of Colored Women, Women's Auxiliary of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, and women representatives of the CIO and AFL.

THE WOMEN also agreed on a resolution asking for the appointment of women to "planning and administration" posts of defense agencies at local, State and National levels. And they asked that the experience and judgment of women be used in any future regulation of prices and allocation of civilian goods.

As Miss Hickey puts it: "We don't want to be called in to listen. We want to be consulted before the policies are made."

OTHER SPEAKERS at the meeting included Mrs. Lucy Howorth, chairman of the Committee on the Status of Women for the American Association of University Women; Mrs. Elinore M. Herrick, formerly of the National Labor Relations Board; Miss Frieda Miller, Director of the Women's Bureau of the Department of Labor; Mrs. Nancy Robinson, Director of Women's Activities of the Savings Bond Division of the Treasury Department; Dr. Gertrude Weiss of the Bureau of Home Economics, Department of Agriculture; Dr. Elizabeth Morrissy of the National Council of Catholic Women; Miss Jane Hoey, Director of the Bureau of Public Assistance of the Social Security Administration.

PLANNING FOR CIVIL DEFENSE—Lady Reading (left), chairman of the Women's Volunteer Services of Great Britain, confers with Mrs. Hiram Houghton, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs. They met yesterday at the Statler Hotel at the all-day meeting of leading National women's organizations charged with the responsibility of mapping plans for the mobilization of women for civil defense. With the State Societies

Twin Cities to Caper Next Week

By Nicha Searle

ALL THE FOLKS from Minneapolis and St. Paul will be in the spotlight on Saturday, October 14.

That's the day the Minnesota State Society will honor Twin Cities residents at the first dance of the season to be held in the Terrace Room of the Washington National Airport. Dancing to the music of Bradley Clay's orchestra will begin at 9:30 p. m.

There'll be more parties for the Gopher State members, too. In addition to the Saturday dance, there will be a dance on December 1—Northern Minnesota Night—with more scheduled as the season progresses.

TONIGHT PROMISES to be a merry night for Tar Heels in Washington. Out at the Shoreham Hotel, in the large ballroom, the North Carolina Society will offer a varied program of fun, frolic and fortune telling, interspersed with bridge and canasta playing. There'll be dancing, of course, with McWilliams Orchestra furnishing the music.

Because it's fall, there will be bushels and bushels of apples from the home State. The floor committee will see that they are well distributed. Edd Edmundson and M. James Worsley are co-chairmen of the committee.

Honor guests for the opening dance tonight are alumni members of East Carolina Teachers' College. Officers of the group are Mrs. Seth Muse, president; Miss Mildred McLawhorn, Miss Lois Reel, Miss Mary Frances Smith, James Worsley, Miss Mary Andrews Whichard and Eugene Price.

Coming to Washington for the reception which will be held prior to the dance are Dr. J. D. Messick; Dr. Leo Jenkins, dean of Teachers' College, and Mrs. Messick; Dr. Leo Jenkins, Dean of the college, and Dr. and Mrs. Beecher Flanagan.

THE "YOUNG MARRIEDS" of the Georgia State Society will be honored at tonight's dance in the West ballroom of the Shoreham Hotel. The reception will be at 9:30 p. m. to be followed by dancing.

Receiving guests will be Mrs. Robert Ramspeck, president of the society; Mr. Ramspeck, Mr. and Mrs. Clark Tate, Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Jackson, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Gasque, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Geeslin, Maj. and Mrs. Roger Lawson, and Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Wicker.

The committee on arrangements for the dance are Mr. and Mrs. Lacy Hinely, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Thurston, Miss Julia Reynolds, Mrs. H. F. Buchholz and Ben Stembridge.

For further information about the dance or the society, call Mrs. Buchholz at Otis 8383.

THE MARYLAND STATE Society officers and trustees will act as hosts today to officers of all the State societies.

The reception will be held in the Shoreham Hotel from 4 until 6 p. m. Mrs. Fulton R. Gordon will head the reception committee. She will be assisted by Mrs. Harvey Strickland, Mrs. Donald Castle and Mrs. William R. Clay.

The next dance of the Maryland State Society will be held on October 28 in the Shoreham Hotel.

THE ILLINOIS State Society will hold a business meeting on October 11, 8 p. m., in the Old House Office Building, room 313. Admission will be by membership cards.

ON FRIDAY, October 13, the Massachusetts Society will open its season with a dance at the Shoreham Hotel. Dancing to Dave McWilliams Orchestra will be from 10 p. m. to 1 a. m.

FROM THE NEBRASKA State Society comes news that it will publish again the unique little booklet, "Who's Who of Nebraskans in Washington."

Begun last year under the direction of Clifford Sandahl, the outgoing president, the booklet contains the name, Washington area address and telephone number as well as the Nebraska home town of each of the members.

In addition to the Nebraska Society's regularly scheduled dances on January 6, March 17 and April 14, a "welcome back" cocktail party is planned for the State's congressional delegation for December 3.

The newly elected president, Walter R. Johnson, has named the following committee chairmen for the coming season: Orland T. Huyck, membership; William W. Spear, entertainment and public affairs; Homer H. Gruenther, tickets and prizes; Herbert Spencer and Lieut. Col. Denver W. Wilson, boatride co-chairman; and Clifford Sandahl, publicity.

ANOTHER SOCIETY which is making plans to have a directory of its members is the Texas State Society. Publication date for the booklet, which will contain the name, address, telephone and Texas hometown of the members, will be sometime this month.

The directory will be issued annually, as and if the succeeding administrations so elect. It will also contain a historical summary of the society annals.

Among the many, many events planned by the Texans are an opening party at Gadsby's Tavern, a dinner at the Mayflower Hotel honoring Supreme Court Justice Tom Clark, a Mexican food dinner, a Texas barbecue and the annual family picnic.

IT WILL BE A "first" for the Oklahoma State Society when they hold their opening dance of the season on October 14.

The dance will be from 9 p. m. to 1 a. m. in the Shoreham Hotel. Newly elected officers of the society will be hosts and hostesses for this dance. Dave McWilliams and his orchestra will furnish the music.

Miss Sterner's Troth Announced,

Mr. and Mrs. Charles James Sterner of Arlington, Va., announce the engagement of their daughter, Helen Julia, to Covington Shackleford, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Nelson Shackleford of Washington. The wedding will take place in December.

Miss Sterner attended George Washington University. Her fiance, a graduate of the University of Virginia, is attending the school of law there. He is a member of Sigma Nu Phi, Delta Sigma Rho and Theta Chi Fraternities.

Gen., Mrs. Young Entertain Friends

By Elizabeth Maguire

BRIG. GEN. AND MRS. GORDON RUSSELL YOUNG were at home yesterday from 5:30 to 7:30 to a group of friends who included the military, diplomats, and Old Washington. A second group, representative of the same circles, will be received on October 20 at the same hours.

The General and his lady received in the drawing room of their residence on Hawthorne st. Mrs. Young wore a wine satin gown, floor length with long sleeves, and a corsage of gardenias pinned at the shoulder. Tall red roses and candlelight decorated the room and cast a pretty glow in the silver wall paper.

In the dining room where tea and coffee were served more red roses centered a lace covered buffet. Mrs. Harold Burton poured coffee, while Mrs. James Lawrence Houghteling poured tea.

Others taking a turn at the silver service included Mrs. Charles C. Glover, jr., Mrs. Charles Franklin Brannan, Lady Franks, wife of the British Ambassador; Mme. Bonnet, wife of the French Ambassador; Mrs. John W. Snyder, Mrs. Leslie Biffle, Miss Nannie Chase, Miss Emily Chase, and Mrs. Glen B. Edgerton.

Attending the fete were Mrs. John Steelman, the Ambassador of Egypt and Mme. Abdul Rahim, the Ambassador of Norway and Mme. Munthe Morgenstierne, Mr. and Mre. Emerson Bigelow, Col. and Mrs. Robert Guggenheim, Mr. and Mrs. George Maurice Morris, the Bishop of Washington and Mrs. Angus Dun, Mr. and Mrs. Edward R. Finkenstaedt, Gen. and Mrs. Thomas B. Larkin, Mrs. McCeney Werlich, and countless more.

BURKE WILKINSON'S new book "Run, Mongoose" was reviewed yesterday afternoon at St. John's bookstall by the Rev. J. Leslie Glenn. Dr. Glenn talked 20 minutes, giving the background of the adventure story. He didn't touch on the plot of the book, yet at the end he had everyone, including the author, sitting on the edge of his chair wondering what would happen next.

Mrs. Wilkinson attended the review and tea which followed. Others in the gathering included Mrs. Rodney Cox, Admiral William Pierre Robert, Canon Richard Williams, Mrs. James Lawrence Houghteling, Mrs. Emory Land.

PARTY PARADE:

Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Chatfield Taylor gave a dinner last evening in their new apartment on Decatur pl. The house warming was also a farewell, as Mr. Taylor is sailing Wednesday on the Mauretania for Paris to attend ECA conferences.

Mr. and Mrs. Tracy Barnes entertained at a dinner for 10 on Thursday evening in their house on 35th st.

FOR MISS NANCY BICKELHAUPT, bride-elect of Maj. Louis Paul d'Autremont, USAF, a linen shower was given yesterday by Mrs. Walter Imrie at her home in Alexandria. Guests included Miss Elaine LeFevre, Mrs. C. R. Hurt, Miss Patsy Powell, Mrs. Edes Talman, Miss Anne Heard and Mrs. William A. Hewitt.

THE VICE CONSUL of the Mexican Embassy and Senora de Contreras entertained last evening at a buffet supper party for their daughter, Maria Luisa Contreras, whose marriage to James David Emmell is to take place today in the Church of the Nativity. A reception at the Mexican Embassy will follow the ceremony.

MRS. MARY E. GREEN, native Washingtonian who was 93 yesterday, will celebrate her anniversary with members of her family on Sunday. For many years Mrs. Green taught in the Washington grade schools, and her two daughters, Miss Elsie Green and Miss Mildred Green, with whom she makes her home, are administrative principals in Washington schools.

On Sunday, Mrs. Green will give a turkey dinner at her house for members of the immediate family, and later at open house, she will receive many more relations and friends.

MR. AND MRS. DONALD E. CURRIER entertained a group of their civilian friends from the renegotiation department of the Army Air Force at an informal supper and canasta party at Wardman Park Tuesday evening.

In the group were the Currier's son and daughter in-law, Maj. and Mrs. Roger M. Currier, who recently returned from three years in Japan where Major Currier was with the Judge Advocate General's staff on the Army trials.

ARRIVALS:

Dr. J. G. de Beus, counselor at the Netherlands Embassy here from 1945 to 1947, has returned to Washington as Minister. He arrived in town Monday with Mrs. de Beus and their daughter, Marjolyn, age 14. Jonkheer O. Reuchlin, whom Dr. Beus succeeds, is returning to Holland sometime before the end of the year.

Guido Piovene, noted Italian writer, is a visitor in Washington for a few days. He will be entertained today by the Italian Press Counselor, Gabriele Paresce, and Signora Paresce at their house in Georgetown from 6 to 8.

NEWS FROM ABROAD

NOW MAKING THEIR HOME in French Morocco are Capt. and Mrs. George Walz, USMC, who were married September 1. Mrs. Walz is the former Miss Deidre Drew, daughter of the United States Minister to the Hashemite Kingdom of the Jordon, Gerald A. Drew, and Mrs. Drew. The ceremony took place in Amman at the Church of Christ the King.

After a reception which followed the ceremony, the couple drove to Damascus, whence they flew to Rome and the Riviera for a honeymoon. Captain Walt is commanding officer of the Marine detachment at the Naval Air Base in Morocco.

ALONG EMBASSY ROW

THE FOREIGN MINISTER OF AUSTRIA, Dr. Karl Gruber, and Mme. Gruber will arrive in Washington on Monday, October 9 to be the guests of the Minister and Mme. Kleinwaechter at the Legation until Friday, October 13.

Entertainments honoring the Foreign Minister and his wife include a reception on October 12, from 6 to 8 at the Legation, and a dinner at the Legation on October 9.

On October 10, Dr. Gruber is to give a talk at the National Press Club, and that evening a reception will be given for him at Georgetown University. The following day, October 11, a dinner will be given for the Foreign Minister by the State Department.

NASROLLAH ENTEZAM, Ambassador of Iran and newly elected President of the UN Assembly, is expected in Washington for the weekend.

MRS. CHARLES HUBERT BENSON is the former Miss Beatrice Elaine Bartlett, daughter of Mrs. Frederick S. Bartlett of Takoma Park, Md. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William P. Benson of Chevy Chase, Md. The wedding took place yesterday in the Sixth Presbyterian Church, the Rev. R. Paul Schearrer officiating. They will reside in Chevy Chase on return from a wedding trip to Atlantic City

In Bridal Procession

Miss Casilde Castelli, daughter of Antonio Castelli, became the bride of Esteban Betancourt, jr., on September 9 at Holy Rosary Church. The bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Esteban Betancourt of Washington.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore satin with a corsage of gardenias and orchids. Her attendants were Mrs. Maria Castelli, matron of honor, and Miss Margarita Betancourt, maid of honor. Giuseppe Musolino was best man, and the ushers were Juan Planas and Ruben Viera.

Hansen—Fauver

Mr. and Mrs. Lester P. Fauver of Staunton, Va., and Washington, announce the marriage of their daughter, Geraldine Claire, to Cpl. Wendell Dean Hansen of Audubon, Iowa, on September 13 in the chapel at Ft. McNair. Chaplain Paul E. Winslow officiated. The bride, gowned in ice blue satin, was given in marriage by her father and attended by Miss Kathleen Ratcliffe of Washington and Richmond., Va. Cpl. Frank M. Guzzo was best man.

The couple will live in Arlington where the bridegroom is stationed. The bride is employed in the Department of Defense.

Henkel—Mott

Mr. and Mrs. Herman Mueller announce the marriage of Mrs. Mueller's daughter, Miss Martha Mott, to George Edward Henkel, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Robert Henkel. The ceremony took place on September 14 at the Gunton Temple Presbyterian Church. Attendants included Mrs. Grant H. Berry, the bride's sister, as matron of honor; Misses Helen I. Moore and Marjorie R. Mann as bridesmaids; J. R. Henkel, jr., as best man, and William W. Henkel and Stanley Stephenson as ushers. A reception followed the ceremony.

Glogau
MRS. MELVIN M. GUSDORF, JR., was Miss Whyman before her marriage October 1 at the Mayflower Hotel. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. F. Whyman of South Boston, Va., and the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Melvin M. Gusdorf of Washington. The newlyweds will live in Washington on return from their Northern wedding trip. The bride attended Mary Washington College and Mr. Gusdorf is an alumnus of George Washington University

You got her fired...

Betty shouldn't have been fired. She wouldn't have been fired . . . if it hadn't been for you. She's naturally too neat, too quick, too efficient a typist. But you kept her out of work for three long months at a stretch. You burdened her with so much responsibility she couldn't think clearly, couldn't accomplish the most routine task without error when she finally did get back to the office. It was a shame, but she had to go . . . because of you.

Because you could only spare a few dollars through the Community Chest last October.

If you had given more, there would have been a competent, comforting Visiting Nurse to take care of Betty's mother for several weeks after she came home from the hospital and developed a serious infection. There would have been no need for Betty to stay home from work . . . no reason for her to have lost her job. But you didn't give more.

So it was up to Betty to be nurse and follow the doctor's instructions the best she could. She had to apply dressings with willing but clumsy fingers, give injections with unsteady, inexperienced hands. She had to tend the baby, cook for the family. She had to lose her small pittance of pay, go into debt for medicine and food. All because you could only spare a few dollars through the Community Chest Campaign last year.

Be more generous this year. Make sure the Community Chest doesn't fall short of its goal again. Make sure there are enough Visiting Nurses to go around everywhere.

When you're given your pledge card, think twice. Think how much you will give . . . then think how much more you can give . . . and give THAT.

Give enough for all the Chest's Red Feather services . . . so that the sick can be healed, the aged comforted, and the young be given a chance to grow up into healthy, normal adulthood.

Give more . . . THROUGH YOUR COMMUNITY CHEST

D. C. Deposits Up 75 Million, Set New Peak

By S. Oliver Goodman

Combined deposits of Washington's 19 banks leaped $75,655,871 in the first nine months this year.

The aggregate on October 4 reached an all-time high of $1,113,484,122 as compared with $1,037,828,185 on December 31, 1949. The banks reported their deposits yesterday in response to the Comptroller of Currency's call for condition as of last Wednesday.

Last call on June 30 showed aggregate deposits here of $1,086,880,097. Since then, the total has advanced $26,604,000.

Previous call dates showed these deposits:

April 24, 1950 ..	$1,068,228,251
Dec. 31, 1949	1,037,828,185
Nov. 1, 1949	1,005,460,914
June 30, 1949 ..	990,996,485
April 11, 1949 ..	1,022,130,959
Dec. 31, 1948 ..	1,020,265,787

Outstanding individual gainer in the first nine months was National Bank of Washington, up 24 million dollars. Deposits of the institution, whose stock control is in the hands of the United Mine Workers, amounted to $84,575,074 on October 4. However, this total was about three million dollars less than on June 30.

Second largest gainer was American Security & Trust Co., up 22 million dollars since the year started. About 20 million of this increase was scored in the last three months.

Other substantial increases for the nine months were recorded by Riggs National, up 10 million; National Metropolitan, up 8.6 million; Union Trust, up four million; Security Savings & Commercial, up two million.

Here are the comparisons for the 19 banks, as compiled by The Washington Post:

CREDIT: Two Washington banks are among 27 headed by the Chase National Bank which have agreed to grant Eastern Air Lines a 30-million-dollar credit to buy planes. The local lenders are Riggs National Bank and American Security & Trust Co. EAL has a new 40-million-dollar equipment program and will use proceeds of the loan to defray most of the cost of 35 new Martin 4-0-4 twin-engine, 40-passenger planes and 14 Lockheed four-engine, 92-passenger super Constellations.

MANAGER: Bradley A. Rogers, Jr., has been made State manager for the District of Columbia for Hiram Walker, Inc. He succeeds Stanley F. Manister who has been promoted to manager of the upState New York territory. A native of Maryland, Rogers was formerly located in this territory and more recently was attached to the New Jersey district merchandising staff of the liquor firm. He saw five years of action during World War II and was released as a first lieutenant.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT for the District of Columbia. Filed Sept. 28, 1950. Harry M. Hull, clerk. John Arthur Worley et al., plaintiffs, vs. the unknown heirs, alienees and devisees of George Walker, deceased, et al., defendants. Civil Action No. 3742-50. Order of publication. The object of this suit is to obtain a judgment establishing of record by adverse possession plaintiffs' title to: Part of original lot numbered Eight (8) in square numbered Ten Hundred Seventeen (1017), better described in complaint, and taxed as lot Eight Hundred and Three (803) in square 1017. On motion of the plaintiffs, it is this 28th day of September, 1950, ordered that the defendants, Ralph Walker, Charles R. Walker, Catherine H. Dalziel, Elizabeth M. Dalziel, Fisher McPherson, James Chandler, Mary Daws, Annie Edwards, Margaret R. Walker, Arthur W. Hewison, Walfred C. Locket, Mary H. Walker, Dumrie Walker, J. Augustus Taylor, Sarah P. Williamson, Amy Walter, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication hereof, otherwise this action will be taken as confessed; and it is further ordered that if aforesaid parties be deceased, the unknown heirs, alienees and devisees of each of them, and the defendants the unknown heirs, alienees and devisees of George Walker, William Prout, Cyrus Walker, Ralph Walker and John Ridout deceased, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the first rule day occurring one month after the day of the first publication of this order, otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default, provided, a copy of this order be published once a week for three successive weeks in the Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Post, good cause having been shown why any longer publication is unnecessary. ADVERTISING OPPORTUNITY
Here's a chance for a college graduate to get a toehold on the advertising ladder. To start, it's only a messenger's job at $30 a week. Within a few months, the next step will be calling on the retail trade, doing merchandising. After that—probably advertising salesman, but maybe research or production or copy, depending on the man. This is really a good opportunity and we want to give it to the right man. Since it's primarily a stepping stone to selling advertising, don't apply unless you have a sales personality. If in doubt, you haven't.

A Smith of Distinction

High Point of Smith Names—'Smith Smith'

EDITOR'S NOTE: America's Number One humorist here tells the riotous story of America's Number One family—the Smiths. H. Allen Smith is the author of "Low Man on a Totem Pole" and "We Went Thataway." This is the last of six articles from the book, "People Named Smith," published this week by Doubleday & Co.

By H. Allen Smith

CHAPTER SIX

On the third day of March in 1950 a boy baby was born in Michigan. He was the son of Glenn E. Smith, chief of the guidance service division of the Michigan Department of Public Instruction.

The new child weighed 7 pounds and 3 ounces and was 22 inches long. I describe his dimensions because he is important.

His first tiny bleatings against the indignity of being born were scarcely over before the father set to work on the age-old problem of finding a distinctive first name for a Smith.

He is the most Smith-conscious of all the Smiths I know, and now his job was to pick a first name for his new son that would distinguish him from the multitude of Smiths.

At length he got it—he christened the child Smith. So far as I know the State of Michigan has the only individual in the entire country whose name is Smith Smith.

A "Stiff" Smith

Among the many admirable Smiths produced in this country was one who served as Postmaster General under McKinley and Theodore Roosevelt. He was Charles Emory Smith, a native of Connecticut who became a newspaper publisher in Philadelphia.

He was scheduled once as a speaker at a dinner where important matters of state were to be discussed. He arrived at the dinner from a drinking bout and he was, in a word, stiff.

When the time came for his address he was given a long and eloquent introduction and all eyes in the banquet hall turned to him. He was unable to get out of his chair. After an embarrassed pause, the meeting proceeded without him.

The following day Smith's own newspaper carried a full account of the dinner on its front page, reporting the other speeches in detail and concluding with this sentence.

"Charles Emory Smith was called upon and his remarks will be found on the following page."

The next page of the newspaper was a vast white blank, save for a single line in small type at the bottom, which said: "What else could he say?"

A Smithless Land

Our chief concern with Charles Emory, however, has to do with another public dinner where he was the principal speaker.

The toastmaster chose to expatiate on the subject of Smiths, delivering himself of all the stale and wheezy jokes growing out of the commonness of the name. Then Charles Emory Smith got up.

"Sometimes," he said, "I find myself wishing that I had lived in the time of Moses, for then I might have escaped such an introduction as has just been accorded me. It is written quite clearly in the Bible, I Samuel XIII 19: 'Now there was no smith found throughout the land of Israel.' It must have been a happy land."

Parted on the Side

My mother is responsible for the fact that I part my name on the side.

When I got my first job on a newspaper back in Indiana, she gave me a little lecture touching upon the commonness of our name and the need to fancy it up a bit in the forepart.

A great moment in my life came some years ago when a girl reporter for a college newspaper came to interview me. Right at the beginning she fixed me with a beady eye and demanded: "Now, tell me what your real name is."

She insisted throughout the interview that "H. Allen Smith" was quite obviously a nom de plume, a thing I had invented, and she went away convinced that I was lying.

A Bare Escape

There was the case of an Allen Smith who was city editor of a newspaper in Passaic, N. J., who once almost got his head knocked off by a group of naked people on account of me.

I had visited a nudist camp back in the hills and had written an article about the peculiar activities I had observed at the establishment while, I, myself, was mother naked. My published story aroused great heat in the bare breasts of the nudists and they descended upon the first Allen Smith they could find—the Allen Smith in Passaic.

He convinced them that he was not the snake, and escaped the humiliation of being cold-cocked by a band of nuts.

The H. Allen Smiths

In more recent years I have encountered all manner of Allen Smiths and Allan Smiths and Allen H. Smiths. The name in assorted combinations is met with everywhere and my curiosity is not aroused any more except by straightaway H. Allen Smiths.

When someone sent me a pamphlet containing the information that Mrs. H. Allen Smith had been appointed a lobbyist for the Indiana League of Women Voters, I accepted the situation with equanimity.

When the Battleship Missouri got stuck in Chesapeake Bay and Rear Adm. Allan E. Smith was given the job of dislodging the big ship, I was curious in only one direction:

I wondered what calibre of cussing the Admiral achieved when his tow-line broke.

Mysterious Telegram

I have in my files a telegram that was delivered to me one night during the Second World War. It was datelined Paterson, N. J., a town in which so far as I know, I have no single acquaintance.

Sometimes I get it out and study it, trying to make something out of it. Thus far I am as bewildered as I was the night it came. It says:

"PASSED THE WORD TO ARSINO"

"Michteldis Radiginde Smith"

It could be a gag, but nothing about it has any meaning to me. I can only conclude that it must have been meant for some other H. Allen Smith and if that be true I strongly suspect that son-of-a-smith was a spy.

Uncommon Commoner

Boyer Just Carries Gallantry Too Far

By John Crosby

I APPROACH the Charles Boyer show with considerable nervousness because I suspect that it is not aimed in my direction, that it is aimed at the feminine side of my household and everyone else's household. Criticizing Charles Boyer is a good deal like expressing opinions on a lady's hat. I have no special talent for it and, even if I had, no woman would give it credence.

Boyer

Bear that in mind, will you, while I wrestle with this unlikely task. "Presenting Charles Boyer" is on the NBC radio network at 10:30 p. m. (WRC) Thursdays. The special distinction of the Boyer show is that its hero behaves toward women with preposterous gallantry. As any fool who knows his way around the kilocycles is well aware, the proper behavior for a radio hero toward a woman is to belt her one in the kisser and, if she gets too far out of hand, strangle her.

Boyer kisses the ladies' hands, bows from the waist, buys them violets and talks a species of rich, complimentary prose that few other actors could get out of their mouths without suffering acute embarrassment. His role is that of a boulevardier down on his luck. He manages to support himself rather handsomely by telling the story of his life in small chunks to one of those writer fellows who then garnishes the tale with adverbs and sells it to American magazines as fiction.

I HAVEN'T HEARD all of Boyer's yarns but each one I have heard has conspicuously featured a damsel in distress. Right there you can see how different the Boyer show is. The damsel-in-distress gambit has been seriously neglected in recent fiction

Your modern damsel is not easily distressed, even when the biggest hoodlum in town has a gun in her ribs and is propelling her in the general direction of eternity. At least that's how things are on the radio, and all I know about life I've learned from the radio.

Boyer's girls, on the other hand, are almost constantly in distress. They are supporting their sick mothers. Or their husbands are in jail and they are endeavoring to preserve the illusions of their small sons who are dying of scrofula. Just as they are on the brink of despair or jail or death or whatever, Boyer happens along and rescues them to the accompaniment of rich Gallic gallantries of speech.

IN THAT CASE, you are probably one of those sour individuals like me who consider Charles Boyer a state of mind (or lack of it) that women get themselves into. It's rather a pity, too. Charles Boyer is a very fine actor. He has almost never been given an opportunity to demonstrate his capabilities because of this myth perpetuated by some Hollywood press agentry.

At one point, Mr. B. got himself tangled with an apparition, supposedly the ghost of Marie Antoinette. Even Marie was not proof against the potency of Hollywood press agentry. "You are a most uncommon commoner," she murmured, fingering him. That's the best example I have, both of the sort of thing that goes on on the Boyer show and of the prose style in which it is encased.

John Isn't Happy Unless He's in the Dog House

President Truman was quoted as saying he wouldn't appoint John L. Lewis dogcatcher; and Mr. Lewis cracked back that if he were given such an appointment, there'd be more brains in the dog department than the State Department.

This may very well be. But the bulldogs under John's jurisdiction would probably develop frightful frustration neuroses.

HOW'S THAT AGAIN?

TWA's Tom Bell postcards from Paris that French traffic authorities have finally found a solution to the parking problem. Motorists are required to park in front of shops with even numbers on even-numbered days of the month, and in front of shops with odd numbers on odd-numbered days of the month.

ᔓᔕ

THE SIGNS SHOULD SAY: "RUN"

John W. Scott, jr., of 812 14th st., Alexandria, Va., shares one of my pet peeves.

He points out that the pedestrian who carefully waits for a "Walk" sign still has no assurance that he'll make it to the opposite curb in one piece. Especially at 13th and E sts. nw.

When motorists have right- and left-turn arrows, the neon sign forbids pedestrian crossing. When motorists have a through arrow only, pedestrians are invited to "Walk."

But all too often, some goof will come barreling through the crosswalk anyhow, and pedestrians must dodge him as best they can.

I'll admit that our arrow system is confusing—especially at night, when it's impossible to read the explanatory wing signs.

But if motorists would keep one fact in mind, they'd avoid such dangerous practices. By law, the pedestrian has the right of way—at an uncontrolled intersection, or at an intersection where both pedestrians and autos are permitted to move simultaneously.

For example, take a full green light, on which the pedestrian starts across at the same time an auto begins to make a right or left-hand turn.

Too many drivers bull their way through; and the pedestrian, who has the right of way, must yield. The driver is dead wrong—but unless the pedestrian wants to be just plain dead, he gets out of the way.

"Housebroken 10-week-old male kitten." (Dupont 6587.)

"Cute 3-month-old kitten." (Lincoln 4-1439.)

"Gentle kitten wants loving home." (Sligo 6808.)

"Six-week-old puppies." (Ordway 7999.)

"One black kitten, two Maltese; housebroken." (Oliver 8035.)

"Male watchdog, loves children, needs yard." (Lincoln 4-5125.)

"Six-week-old pups, mostly springer spaniel." (Victor 6483.)

Aluminum Stockpiling Is Critical

By Drew Pearson

For several weeks, Chairman Stuart Symington of the National Security Resources Board has been making disagreeable statements at Cabinet meetings.

Symington

"I'm sorry to tell you, Mr. President, that the stockpiling program is not going well," Symington has warned. "In fact, it isn't going at all."

It is now possible to get a clearer picture of what Symington means. It is also understandable why Hubert Howard suddenly resigned as chairman of the Munitions Board, the agency supposed to stockpile vital materials so the Nation would not be caught short again in wartime.

It can now be revealed that one of the most shocking deficiencies which the Munitions Board did little about was aluminum. During World War II, American housewives were called upon to donate pots, pans and kettles to help their country, because war planners and private industry had failed to anticipate aluminum needs. Now it looks as if, in case of all-out war, we might have to do the same thing again. For, believe it or not, the Munitions Board did not even try to buy aluminum for stockpiling until August 4, more than a month after the Korean war started.

This amazing failure was partly due to backstage maneuvering of the giant Aluminum Corp. of America, the empire built up by the late Andrew Mellon, Secretary of the Treasury under Coolidge and Hoover. Alcoa, which called the signals wrong in World War II, is now doing the same at the start of what may be World War III.

History Repeats

Here is how history is repeating.

WORLD WAR II—In August, 1940, Alcoa's manager, Irving M. Wilson, announced his company was "in a position to supply the United States Government both Army and Navy, with all the aluminum it will require for national defense within the next year" and that "a substantial surplus" would be left over to fill British orders.

Various Government advisors disagreed, chiefly Leon Henderson, later OPA administrator, and Robert Nathan, war plans brain truster. They argued, urged, and begged that aluminum production be increased—to no avail.

The rest of the story is well known to every housewife. The shortage that followed helped break the complete monoply Alcoa had on aluminum in this country. At the urging of the United States Government, Reynolds Metals, and the Henry Kaiser Co. went into the aluminum business. However, thanks to a $65,900,000 RFC subsidy granted by Jesse Jones, Alcoa also built a giant plant on the Saguenay River in Canada, financed by the United States Government interest-free, and not subject to high United States taxes. It was a windfall to Alcoa's twin sister, the Aluminum Corp. of Canada.

The Present War Crisis—Ten years later the Aluminum Corporation of America, on September 25, 1950, inserted an ad in New York papers, promising plenty of aluminum for everyone. "To our government we report," said the ad, "there is plenty of aluminum for any announced military program."

Despite this promise so reminiscent of World War II, the Nation is already so short of aluminum that the Agriculture Department has had to stop building aluminum storage bins and aluminum is now allocated to most manufacturers.

Meanwhile, Alcoa doesn't want new plants built in this country, but is trying to persuade the Munitions Board to buy aluminum from its sister company, Alcan, the Aluminum Corporation of Canada. But Arthur Vining Davis, chairman of Alcoa, is also a large stockholder in Alcan, and his nephew, Nathaniel Davis, is its president. In fact, the Quebec town where Alcan's plant is located is called Arvida, in honor of Arthur Vining Davis.

Furthermore, the two companies' policies go hand-in-hand. Last month when the Aluminum Corporation of America boosted its price 10 per cent, the Aluminum Corporation of Canada immediately followed suit.

Motive behind Alcoa's demand that we buy aluminum from its Canadian twin sister is to prevent building up any fresh competition from Kaiser and Reynolds. The less competition Alcoa has, the higher prices the Government and the public pay. Thus, during World War II, aluminum prices shot up to 67 cents a pound, and remained double the prewar price long after the armistice. After Reynolds and Kaiser started competing with Alcoa in World War II, however, the price of aluminum dropped 20 to 15 cents per pound, and now the price is 20 percent below the prewar level—all thanks to the American principle of free competition.
